

Army Officer Urges Enlistments in Guard and American Legion

The recent killing of men in the uniform of the United States Army in Central Washington emphasizes the statements made by the Army Recruiting Officer here. Many men are unable for good and valid reasons to find more than their moral influence and support to the cause of justice and right. These men should give full measure of support to the constitution and the government. Others, and their numbers run into hundreds of thousands—foot loose and fancy free, are able to enlist in the Regular Army of the United States, an organization which has ever been the bulwark of our Government in time of crises. Such young men as do enlist can have the satisfaction that they will get more out of the service than they put in it; for in the army they will be trained mentally, morally, physically and manually into better men. They will acquire a finer quality of citizenship which will endure throughout life. They appreciate the authority of the regular army and its orderly processes in all things.

Many men, physically fit, but unable to devote the time to the Government, owe it to themselves, their state and their nation to join the National Guard of their respective communities where they will obtain probably in less degree the same benefits to be derived through service in the Regular Army.

Those young men who served with the colors in the World War and who are patriotic citizens can and should join their brothers of the American Legion, or some other organization, pledged to pure Americanism.

Young or old, rich or poor, the time has come for every man to show on which side he stands. We have come to the parting of the way!

National Museum to Exhibit War Trophies and Allied Uniforms

The new National Museum in Washington will shortly have ready for public inspection a remarkable collection of relics, trophies and articles associated with the World's War. The task of selection and collection was assigned by the secretary of War to General H. L. Rogers, Quartermaster General of the Army.

A great deal of this material has already been received and a part of it is arranged in exhibition cases, including samples of uniforms of all the countries engaged in the great conflict.

The exhibit of apparel includes every article worn, together with the equipment in detail. In the case of the uniform of the highest ranking officers there has been an exact duplication of the apparel, including decorations, used by the senior commanding officer in each country.

The collection includes a remarkable exhibit of chemical warfare material, which will be carefully arranged by an expert of that branch of the service.

The articles under ordnance embrace weapons of all descriptions and projectiles, in which latter case the shells have been "sliced" so as to show internal structure.

When the exhibit is completed and ready for inspection it will constitute, in the hall especially devoted to it, one of the most interesting and informing displays in the National Museum.

"Orphan Army" of Poland Being Moved

Posen, Western Poland, Nov. 28.—Poland's "orphan army" is being moved, in large units, from the eastern front to western Poland. The first group of 500 orphans, gathered in the desolated regions east of the River Bug, has just been brought across the country to a new children's home in Posen equipped by the American Red Cross.

Other large orphanages here in Western Poland are being prepared by the Polish authorities, with American help, to receive orphans and children who are now taxing the capacities of homes along the east front.

Oppose Geneva as Being League Seat

Geneva, Nov. 28.—The Swiss government has not yet accepted the offer of the Peace Conference to make Geneva the seat of the League of Nations. When the offer was made it was thought here that the Swiss would gladly accept it without parley.

One reason why this has not been done is that action upon Switzerland's adherence to the league has been so long delayed. Another reason is the opposition to the location of the seat of the league in Geneva on the part of Swiss Germanophile socialists and radicals who are strongly opposed to the league.

Serbia Decorates American Nurse the Second Time

Podgoritz, Nov. 28.—The first American nurse to contract typhus in Montenegro has been awarded her second decoration by the Serbian government. She is Miss Bernice Brady, of Springfield, Ill. She already wears the ribbon of the Serbian Order of Mercy. Now she can add to that beautiful silver and crimson enamel badge of the First Order of the Serbian Red Cross.

Germans Seek British Trade in Certain Articles

London, Nov. 28.—The Germans are making a very big effort to capture the British trade in certain articles. Already silk, cotton and other manufactured articles are being bought in large quantities. Samples of German toys have also been received and it is believed the object of the samples is to test the markets before regular delivery in bulk.

BRITISH NURSES TO HAVE A UNION

London, Nov. 28.—British nurses are to have a trade union. At the meeting where the new organization had its inception, the nurses expressed the hope that any strike in which the members might in future participate would be directed against the employers and not the patients.

Priestley Home Bought by Penn State Chemists

Announcement has just been made of the purchase of the 123-year-old Dr. Joseph Priestley mansion at Northumberland, Pa., by graduate chemists of the Pennsylvania State College, and that it is their intention to move the dwelling of the discoverer of oxygen to the campus at State College, there to make it a memorial to the great scientist. The Priestley home was put up for sale at public auction several weeks ago and was purchased by the Penn State Chemists, represented by Dr. G. G. Pond, dean of the School of Natural Science at the College. Funds for the removal of the homestead to the campus will be furnished by an as yet unknown donor, and this work will probably start in the spring. The house was built in 1794-1976; is located on the banks of the Susquehanna river, and a part of it was used as a laboratory by the noted scientist until his death in 1804. In 1874 a large number of American chemists gathered there to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the discovery of oxygen, and they formed the nucleus of what is now the American Chemical Society. In addition to oxygen, Priestley discovered ammonia, carbon monoxide and hydrochloric acid. No location has yet been selected on the campus for the building. It will be modernized and adapted to some suitable use by the School of Natural Science.

England Pays Out Big Pension Fund

London, Nov. 28.—This country is paying out each month in pensions to disabled and discharged soldiers and dependents a total of £8,21,000, according to a statement made in Parliament by Sir Worthington

Evans. This means a yearly expenditure of nearly £100,000,000. A BOON TO AMATEURS "Why are oysters on the half shell so popular?" "Well, my dear, if you can get somebody to open them, they are something that the poorest cook can serve."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
