"When a Girl Marries"

By ANN LISLE

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problem of a Girl Wife

[Copyright, 1919, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.]

Sending a finger of light to beckon me, the sun lured me from sleep on the first morning of our visit with Jeanie and Pat. From happy dreams I came to wakefulness as happy.

For a while I lay still remembering how perfect life had been the evening before. Pat's unspoken gratitude, Virginia's devotion and the loyal and satisfying love Jim had shown were as wonderful to remember as to wake up again.

The day's too good to waste playing lazy-lie-abe, Anne Harrison said to myself. "Up with you and go see the world while yet the dew's on the thorn." Ann never fear, for your Jimmie will sleep up like a peaceful little boy."

Which Jim did, sleeping serenely while I tip-toed around and made myself ready to go down and greet the day.

In the living room I found Bertha, dusting while Lyons shook rugs and swept with right good will.

"Doesn't he make the grand butler, now?" asked the woman, after they had both made me a cheerful good morning.

"It's splendid of you to help Bertha," I said to Lyons with the warm approval I felt for their evident devotion.

The seriousness with which the man replied had a touch of passion.

"Why shouldn't I then, Mrs. Harrison, seeing she's the best wife ever was? And beyond and beside there you and your folks. Whatever I can do to help keep up the place where you live that's my job, all right."

The gratitude and loyalty and peace of those poor, once-persecuted souls was the final touch to my exquisite happiness. I think there never was greater peace of heart and soul than mine as I set off for a morning stroll down dew-kissed paths.

Wandering without purpose or aim, I found myself presently passing the Summer house and meandering along the lake to the thread of path leading from Dreamworld to Mason Towers.

"Well, I've started, so I'll dip out onto the highway and come back through the front gate," I told myself. "And then if my lazy family is still asleep I'll wake every last one of 'em with a kiss—including Pat."

Smiling at my own happy imper-

thence, I came to the tiny turnstile set behind the mossy steps leading from the green tangle of the river's banks to the dusty curve of the high road. The road was a long ribbon of sun and blank—for a moment—of a woman's vaguely familiar, battiship gray shape loomed up a mile away at the cross roads, which I could just see from my top stovers gate and come for a moment hesitatingly, then with cut-out open and with terrific speed sweeping it forward, it made the turn and sprang down the highway toward me.

At that instant the honk of a horn made me turn my head. I saw Evvy's blue car, sweep out of the stream—a medley of a vaguely familiar, battiship gray shape loomed up a mile away at the cross roads, which I could just see from my top stovers gate and come for a moment hesitatingly, then with cut-out open and with terrific speed sweeping it forward, it made the turn and sprang down the highway toward me.

SECOND EFFORT TO ALLAY UNREST IS UNDER WAY

Seventeen Widely-known Men to Devise Means For Settling Chaotic Conditions

Washington, Dec. 1.—Seventeen men widely known in business and public life, representing no particular group as such but acting for the people as a whole, assembled here today to confer on the country's industrial situation. The conference, the appointment of which was announced from the White House November 29, marks the second effort of President Wilson to devise means for settling the chaotic conditions that have prevailed for months in industry. It was designed to accomplish what the recent national industrial conference failed on. The opening session was set for 2:30 o'clock.

Public Not to Suffer

No form of procedure was set for the gathering and this will be determined by the conference itself. In the words of President Wilson, the new "representatives should have concern that our industries may be conducted with such regard for justice and fair dealing, that the workmen will feel themselves induced to put forth their best efforts that the employer will have an encouraging profit and that the public will not suffer at the hands of either class."

Use of the Pan-American building was granted to the conference. It was believed the sessions would be closed but this question remained to be decided by the delegates themselves after organization. Organized labor has expressed dissatisfaction with the personnel of the conference because of the fact that no labor men were named although they claimed every other interest was represented. The conferees, former Federal and state officials, businessmen and economists, are as follows: Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson; George W. Wickersham, New York lawyer, attorney general in Taft cabinet; Oscar S. Straus, New York, diplomat, lawyer and author; secretary of commerce and labor under Roosevelt; Frank Taussig, Washington, political economist, former college professor and chairman of the United States Tariff Commission; Samuel W. McCall, Boston, lawyer, former governor of Massachusetts; Herbert Hoover, mining engineer and former food administrator; Martin H. Glynn, Albany, newspaperman and former governor of New York; H. Stuart, business man and former governor of Virginia; W. O. Thompson, Presidential minister and president of Ohio State University; George T. Slade, St. Paul, railway man and lieutenant colonel; A. E. F. Julius Rosenberg, Chicago, merchant and philanthropist; O. D. Young, New York lawyer; Henry J. Walters, agricultural economist and former president of Kansas State College of Agriculture; Stanley King, Boston lawyer, former member Council of National Defense and assistant secretary of war; Henry W. Robinson, Pasadena, former member of the United States Shipping Board, and Richard Hooker, Springfield, Mass., newspaperman.

law" have been applied with impartial effect to Jenkins.

Jenkins was imprisoned for "rendering false judicial testimony" in connection with the abduction of which he was the victim, says the note. "In whose interest is the charge of false swearing brought against Jenkins?" asks the note. "His abductors? The Mexican government is prosecuting the victim instead of the perpetrators of the crime."

Merely Opinion

While the outlaws who endangered his life and took away a large part of his fortune enjoy their freedom, the Mexican authorities now deprive Jenkins of his liberty. That Jenkins is supposed to be guilty of rendering false judicial testimony, the note says, is merely an opinion of the Mexican government "entirely unsupported by evidence."

The Mexican government cannot argue that it cannot interfere with the judicial processes of a state unless there has been a denial of justice, the American note argues, because, it contends, there already has been a denial of justice, and the power of the federal government to "all cases concerning consular officers and diplomatic agents."

Must Show Cause

The United States is not to be driven "by such subtle arguments," says the note, "into a defense of its request for the release of Mr. Jenkins. It is for Mexico to show cause for his detention; not for the United States to show cause for his liberation."

Then, the note says, "stripped of extraneous matter, with which the Mexican note of November 26 en-

PENROSE MADE BIG GAIN, SAYS HIS PHYSICIANS

Reports Reaching This City Indicate That He Will Recover Strength Rapidly

Telephone messages from Philadelphia this morning were to the effect that Senator Boies Penrose made rapid gains yesterday and last night and that if he obeys his physicians and remains perfectly quiet for the next few weeks he will be able to resume his work at Washington before Christmas.

Dr. Charles B. Penrose, president of the State Game Commission and brother of the Senator, has taken entire charge of the case and has refused to allow the Senator to be bothered by visitors or to attend to any work.

Dr. Penrose said that it was simply a case of a man overworking. "The Senator has not had a vacation since the war began," said he. "He has to take a complete rest."

The Senator left word when he

Famous Football Player Guest of Classmate

W. W. Heffelfinger, of Minneapolis, famous guard of the Yale football team in 1889-92, was the weekend guest of his classmate, George W. Reilly. He was enroute home from New York, where he had spent several weeks and in a discussion with Vance C. McCormick, a member of the Yale Athletic Council, who will attend an important conference on the athletic situation at the New Haven university this week. Mr. Heffelfinger gave some interesting views regarding the present-day training of football squads and his opinion will have great weight in the outlining of plans for 1920. Mr. Heffelfinger is a giant in stature and is deeply interested in the game which made him famous during his college days. Boiled down the distinguished
