THOUSAND ARE OUT FOR DEER IN STATE

Estimated Last Night at Carlisle That Fifty-Bucks Have Fallen Before Hunters' Guns in South Mountain Region in Cumberland County

Throughout Central Pennsylvania, thousands of hunters are in the valleys and mountains in quest of deer. As a result many employes are out of duty at industrial plants, railroad shops and yards and in scores of offices. The number of hunters has been increased many fold by former soldiers, who learned to shoot straight and often in the war with Germany. Sportsmen in this city who have followed the records of former years say there never before was such an outpouring to the hunting grounds in this section of Pennsylvania.

It is estimated that at least 3,000 hunters are in the South Mountain, in Cumberland county, in quest of the game. A Carlisle hunter stated last night that at least 50 deer had been killed in the mountainous regions adjacent to that town.

When he killed a deer during the first hour of the hunting season, W. Grant Raub, a Red Lion contractor and builder, established a record as the champion deer hunter of that place. During the past 14 years Raub has killed a deer each season except one. The last four deer killed were each brought down during the first hour of the season.

The members of the O. K. Hunting Club of New Cumberland, who are hunting deer in the vicinity of Biglerville, Adams county, succeeded in killing two bucks on the opening day of the season.

R. G. Shaffer, a former Chambersburg patrolman on the police force, shot a 125-pound four-pronged buck near Caledonia. Shaffer had been hunting about an hour and a half when he shot the animal.

S. P. Markley and Gordon Whitcomb, of Bolling Springs, each yesterday reported having killed a buck near Hunters Run.

A message from Chambersburg this morning told that Garnet J. Gillan, of St. Thomas, returned from the South Mountain with a 130-pound buck, and that Benjamin C. Miller, of Chambersburg, brought down a 125-pound spike buck near Pond Bank.

The Elizabethtown Club, at Pine Grove Furnace, shot a buck yesterday, Harry Gochenaur, of Florin, being the lucky hunter.

At a fire at the camp of the Rounderville Club near Waynesboro, one of the heaviest losses was that of Samer, one of the five Pittsburgh members of the club, who had a $150 overcoat destroyed. These Pittsburgh men also lost their wool bed blankets and costly automobile robes they had spread on their bunks.

Jack Trough and Harold Weaver went deer hunting in the vicinity of Huntingdon and their luck was bad. They were returning home in the evening in Weaver's automobile. When passing Fiddler's Green, on Warrior's Ridge, they saw two large bucks grazing in a field. They stopped the truck, both got out, took aim, counted three and fired. Each got a buck.

A party of six Altoona gunners, hunting this week near Spruce Creek, returned home with a 200-pound buck brought down by Clem Portney. The buck showed six points and according to residents at Spruce Creek, the animal is one of the finest shot in that vicinity in many years.

Letter Reveals Plot to Blow Up Opera House and Set Building Afire

Columbia, Pa., Dec. 4.—An anonymous letter received by a person in town and turned over to the chief burgess revealed a supposed plot to blow up the opera house and set fire to buildings in the business section. Chief Burgess D'Miller informed the borough council, then in session, of the matter and steps were at once taken to increase the vigilance of the chief of police and other officers. The public safety committee remained on duty nearly all night. A drama then running in the opera house under local talent was nearly brought to an abrupt ending after the report became known to some of the children who were taking part, some being so frightened that they would not return to the building. The fire companies were held in readiness for any action desired. It was reported that similar letters had been sent to the engine house.
