WORK AMONG THE FOREIGN-BORN

Daughters of American Revolution Hear Speakers; Anniversary Plans Made

"America is not a melting pot, it is something far more human and vital, more divine and spiritual than that. What we need to keep steadily in mind is, that the process of Americanization is not the reduction of all to a common denominator, but the elevation of all to the highest possible plane; to consider that each race reacts on the other to the enrichment of all; and to endeavor to realize that the various racial stocks, thus contributing, lose their separate and distinct identity in the building of a new entity, a new race, which shall be a demonstration, in this day of grace, of the blood brotherhood of all men and the spiritual oneness of the sons of God."

With this convincing statement, Miss Rosa Santee, superintendent of deaconess work for the Methodist churches of Harrisburg, closed her talk on work among the foreign-born before Harrisburg chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday afternoon in the Civic Club. From her own experience, Miss Santee finds that it is imperative to meet these foreign-born women in their own homes, showing them that an interest is taken in them individually and that American women want to help each one work out her own problem.

Clarence K. Weaver, superintendent of special activities for the Harrisburg school board, followed Miss Santee with a brief resume of plans already in operation and more for the future in Harrisburg's education of her foreign-born. He said that many foreigners, coming to this country, are educated men, but lack a knowledge of English—for instance several dyers here were chemists of note in their own country. Teach them English and many of them will also with native-born men and women in professional and household arts, for they have as much brain and capability as they.

To create good American citizens and the maintenance of the American standard of living.

Wood, Jr., and that especially interested them.

CIVIC WORKERS OF CAMP HILL

December Meeting Brings Much of Interest Before the Members

Camp Hill Civic Club held its December meeting yesterday afternoon in Firemen's Hall, at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Mabel Cronise Jones, the speaker of the afternoon, gave a delightful and instructive talk on current events. The importance of America's handling of the prevailing unrest due to foreign propaganda, the present Mexican situation, the progress of the aero service, and the woman suffrage amendment were among the subjects discussed.

Owing to the change of residence of the president, Mrs. Helen Gale, Goodman to Bethlehem, Pa., Mrs. William M. Denison, the first vice-president, presided. Mrs. Goodman's departure from Camp Hill means a loss to the town of one of its most active and efficient civic workers.

Mrs. George A. Stearns, a delegate to the State Federation of Women's Clubs meeting held at Scranton in October, made a most interesting and helpful report. In the form of a resolution, the club expressed its sorrow and keen sense of loss in the death of Mrs. Helen Gale Harding, one of its faithful, active and most admired members and a former president.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

ARE you interested in unusual opportunities? I'm going to tell you of a most extraordinary one and a little story connected with it. Sometime ago a charming young matron came to the shop of Louis, the Ladies' Tailor—you know where it is, in the Masonic building. She wanted a fur coat she said, a rich, sumptuous fur coat, such as only Louis can make. All details were arranged and after a trip to New York, where he purchased the pelts, he started to shipping most delectable coat. As he was working he received an unexpected visit from the prospective owner, who was in great distress over a rumor she had heard. Someone had told her—probably in good faith, but, nevertheless, mistakenly—that such a coat as she described could not be made in this city and that Louis, while taking the credit to himself, would order it from New York. Imagine her joy when she was escorted to his workrooms, where she found him personally working on the coat. And now for the opportunity—you, too, are welcome to visit his workrooms any day or even in the evening, where he will carefully show you how he cuts the furs and puts them together. For, all reports to the contrary, Louis does make his own fur coats.

WE call it "Saltzgeber's Art and Antique Store," but the Gift Store would be as appropriate a name. Distinctive gifts—gifts with a use and a charm—confront one in every nook and corner of the room. Gleaming bits of brass, some from far away Russia, others from the hands of our own craftsmen, are there. Polychrome candlesticks, decorated cardles, attractive book-ends and genuinely good pictures hold equally prominent places in the interesting array. Then, too, Mr. Saltzgeber is showing a group of Petite Water Colors by Vinton Ritter. Have you seen them in his window? Local scenes depicted and reproduced by a sweep of the brush, when framed in a Saltzgeber frame, would make most acceptable gifts.

SANTA CLAUS must surely be proud of his local branch shop. Truly, if I didn't know better, I'd be inclined to believe that his main store would be right here in Harrisburg. And so would you after a visit to the Marianne Toy Shop on Locust street. Such a bewildering and never-ending assortment of tiny toys' gifts makes one gasp in sheer pleasure and dismay. First of all come the books. What heaps of them and shelves of them, too! There are linen books for the wee, small folks, and big, thick books for the growing lad. There are nursery rhymes set to music, and oh, just a hundred and one different kinds. Then come the puzzles. Fascinating jig-saw puzzles vie with numerous other sorts for first place in the kiddies' affections. And as for games—well, every game you ever heard of is there plus some brand new ones, too. Particularly interesting is the magnetic fish pond game or for that matter the old-fashioned fish pond as well.

HANDKERCHIEFS always make such practical gifts because everyone uses them. And handkerchiefs such as one fine at the Art and Gift Store, 106 North Second street, are not only practical, but dainty and beautiful as well. Take, for instance, those for kiddies, coming three in a box. Tiny nursery rhyme sets, embroidered in color, peep from the corners, adding a charm that no small tot can resist. Selling for forty-five and fifty cents a box, they make just the loveliest gift possible for any diminutive person. Then, too, there are exquisite handkerchiefs for Misses—hundreds of them, in fact—suitable for every occasion. Some are of plain white linen, others are embroidered in white, while still others are attractively embroidered in colors. Best of all are clever little folders with pocketed butterfly on top, for sending them in.

SOMEONE asked me several days ago why so many men are so enthusiastic over the Army and Navy Shoe Store. "Is it because of the name?" she queried. "You know many men who were in the service still feel that old Uncle Sam supplied better shoes than they had ever worn before, so I thought perhaps the very name of the shop attracts them." Perhaps it does the first time, but they return the second time because they are so well satisfied. And then they keep on returning for the same reason. For the Army and Navy Shoe Store carries a grade of shoes not to be surpassed anywhere. "Quality plus service" is the motto of the shop, and hundreds of boosting customers will testify.

The End of The World
Everyone in New York is talking about "the end of the world" due, I believe, December 17th. So here I've expended all the work and worry involved in establishing a thriving business merely to have it wind up December 17th.
—Always Worth Par
Somehow or other I can't get very nervous about this prospective cataclysm. I've an idea that my landlord will be around for his rent just as usual, on January first. And I'd better have the money ready. It won't do to offer the plea that I thought the world was coming to an end. Landlords are so very practical—inclined to be unsympathetic.
Of course if you think the world is going to wind up in a few days you won't care to invest in Christmas presents. But if, like me, you're skeptical, you'll find a Gift Bond from my store the solution of the problem of what to give her.
Mary Sachs
North Third Street at No. 210
This Store Will Be Closed Every Evening Before Christmas.
