LECTURES TODAY ON ORCHESTRAS

Paul E. Beck Speaks Before Wednesday Club Preparatory to Concert

"Most people listen to the music of a symphony orchestra as an infant gazes at a bright object—in a state of beatific coma," quoted Paul E. Beck, State Supervisor of Public School Music, in his lecture before the Wednesday Club in Fahnstuck Hall this afternoon.

Mr. Beck, who spoke on "The Mechanism and Dynamic Construction of the Modern Symphony Orchestra," said that the average person listening to a symphony orchestra hears but a mass of sound, becoming more and more entranced by its beauty, but not truly appreciating the performance as he would had he some knowledge of the mechanism of the organization.

The lecture did not in any way touch upon the analysis of music, but dealt instead with the instrumentation and the wonderful manner in which the great modern composers have used the orchestra as a painter uses his colors, bringing out its magis tones the deep purples, dark browns, and vivid reds so that we can literally hear them throbbing through their masterpieces. In direct contrast, the early works are colorless, using one quality of tone.

The lecture was beautifully illustrated with slides made from photographs presented to Mr. Beck by the Philadelphia, New York and Chicago Symphony Orchestras. Among the most interesting of the group were the pictures of the orchestra themselves. One showed the Philadelphia Orchestra as it appeared in connection with the great chorus of 400 voices upon the occasion when Gustave Mahler's Eighth Symphony was produced for the first time in America in 1917.

The last slide showed a portrait of Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, made from a recent painting by Leopold Seyffert.

Miss Martha Snavelly, president of the Wednesday Club, presented Mr. Beck to an audience comprised of club members and their friends who heard the lecture preparatory to the concert to-night.

Miss Martha Baynes and Miss Edith F. Baynes, of Wilmington, Del., are in the city for a short stay, looking up old friends.

Carlos M. Harris went to Maine to-day for a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Denton F. Foster, of Green street.

Charles Howard Andrews went home to Pittsburgh last night after a week's stay with Mr. and Mrs. Ellis H. Owen, his uncle and aunt.

Grange Urges Farmers to Fight Tuberculosis Pittsburgh, Dec. 10.—The Pennsylvania State Grange, after hearing an address by Col. John D. McLean, Deputy Commissioner of Health of the State, passed the following resolutions: "We recognize tuberculosis as a menace to our rural communities. Recent publication of 12,885 as the number of people in Pennsylvania who succumbed in 1918 to the white plague (a larger number than in any previous year except in 1906 and 1907, reveals that this State along with the western countries of Europe is giving an increased toll of human lives because of the privations of the war period. The statement of Colonel Edward Martin, State Commissioner of Health, that fully as many are dying this year of consumption should mean widespread civilian efforts in aiding the State combat this scourge. "Resolved, therefore, That the Pennsylvania State Grange, in an annual session at Pittsburgh, regards as highly important to the welfare of the State the work being carried on by the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and most strongly urges that the farmers of Pennsylvania give every possible aid to the intensive work being started to end this plague in this generation. One way in which every person can assist is by buying Christmas Seals and Health Bonds, which finance the citizen fight against tuberculosis."

TELLING STORIES TO THE CHILDREN

Several Christmas Matinees Arranged by Local Branch of Story League

The Story Tellers League has invited every child in the city to the story hours on Saturday afternoon, December 13. This is the occasion for the annual Christmas story matinee, to which the children look forward each year with such interest and for which the Story Tellers have prepared their most interesting stories. There will be music also for the little ones and they will be given a chance to sing the Christmas songs they love best.

There will be plenty of room this year for every one for instead of one story hour, as has been given each year, there will be three, so that all the children may come. For the little ones on the Hill, a story matinee will be held in the auditorium of the Edison Junior High school.

For those in the up-town district a story hour will be held in the auditorium of the Camp Curtin Junior High school, and for the little folks in the down-town district one will be held in the Technical High school.

Last year over 800 children crowded into the auditorium and some of the small people did not secure a good seat. That is why the Story Tellers League, with the help of Clarence H. Zorger, of the department of special activities for the school board, planned to have a story hour in all parts of the city. They will all be given on the same day, Saturday, December 13, and at the same hour, 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. David J. Reece, president of the Story League, has extended a cordial invitation to every child in the city as well as their parents and friends.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

NATURALLY my one thought these days is to search for gifts—the thing in which everyone is most interested. It goes without saying that I find many lovely ones, particularly at the Saltzgeber Art and Antique Store, 223 North Second street. Yesterday, for instance, I discovered a distinctive wrought iron lamp with attractive parchment shade. Oddly shaped, yet well-balanced and graceful, it would make an ideal gift. Then, too, in one of the windows of the store, there is a most artistic aquarium of Tiffany glass and wrought iron. As a table aquarium—one of the latest fads—it could not be excelled.

IS there anything more attractive than a beautifully trimmed Christmas tree? And is there anything that adds more to its effectiveness than a myriad of sparkling, gleaming electric lights? The candles of olden days have been supplanted by this safer, newer method of illumination, and as drab, little Candelaria, by the touch of a wand, was transformed into a shimmering, glimmering beauty, so the dull little tree, at the turn of a switch, suddenly blazes forth in splendor. If by any chance you have neglected this important decorative feature in the years that have passed, don't fail to add it this Christmas season. At the Dauphin Electrical Supplies Co., 434 Market street, you will find a complete lighting outfit for your tree.

MANY men who work in the open find buckle arctics absolutely indispensable during the winter months. In fact, without them they would suffer from continually wet feet. But despite the fact that they are a great protection they, in themselves, are not enough. No, in order to keep the feet from freezing, warm sheep-wool shoes or snug felt ones should be worn inside. Only the man who spends his days out-of-doors can appreciate the relief they bring. Ofttimes it is hard to find them but the Army and Navy Shoe Store, Court street, is showing a complete line.

Judgment Applied to Christmas Giving It has often been noted that many people who exert the soundest judgment ordinarily seem to lose this faculty at Christmas. They make most inappropriate gifts and often don't seem particularly interested in getting 100 cents worth of value for every dollar they expend. Why not make your money go just as far Christmas as at any other time? And why not select sensible gifts which will be genuinely appreciated? If you are puzzled regarding what to give your wife, your mother or your sister give a thought to my shop. A pretty blouse or some other dress accessory will certainly be welcomed. And if you don't care to actually select the gift buy a Gift Bond good for anything in my assortment up to the amount indicated. Always Worth Par
