IT is estimated that anywhere from 15 per cent. to 40 per cent. of the ashes from your heater can be salvaged and put to work again.

An ash-sifter will save you many, many dollars. Get one and put it to practical use.

When the dust has fallen through the sifter you will have left—many pieces of unburned coal many pieces of partly burned coal perhaps a clinker or two perhaps a piece of stone.

The stone, easily recognized by its weight, should be thrown away.

The rest can usually be burned again. Do not make the mistake of saving only the black or unburned pieces.

The partly burned pieces of coal, gray or white in appearance, can always be used again.

Reclaimed coal could be put in a separate pile and used when the fire is red-hot or in banking at night.

When it is used to bank a fire, a thin layer of new coal should be thrown in the fire, then a layer of reclaimed coal and another layer of new coal.

Consider the number of tons of coal you use in a year and the amount of your investment, and you will realize what a saving this means.
