COMPLETE PLANS OF WOMAN'S CLUB

All Interested in New Movement to Meet in Civic Club Wednesday Night

The second organization meeting of the club for women and girls over 16 years of age of Harrisburg, will be held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Civic Club Assembly Hall, Front street entrance.

At the preliminary meeting held at the Penn-Harris in November, the members present voted "to form a club, the membership of which shall be open to all women and girls over 16 years of age. This means that the club's membership will not be limited to just business and professional women, but will include all women. A club that is nonsectarian, self-governing and is self-supporting—its aim will be to promote democracy and co-operation among women. Its program will be of recreation and education.

Miss Louise Palmer Evans, organizing secretary for the National League of Women Workers, New York city, is in the city to complete the organization of the club.

The Civic Club of Harrisburg through its officers has taken a keen interest in the proposed club and has offered its beautiful clubhouse to them rent free, for meetings. This will cover a period of six months, beginning January 1, 1920, and allow for one meeting a week. The new club, the name of which will be decided Wednesday evening, December 17, will, of course, pay toward the lighting and cleaning. These temporary quarters will tide them over until permanent quarters can be secured. It is hoped that every one will co-operate to make this club a real community factor for that would be "real politics—the voluntary surrender of some private good for the upbuilding of some community good. It is in such exercises that the fiber of democracy grows sound and strong."

It is hoped that every one who is interested as well as all those present at the November meeting will be at the meeting Wednesday evening at which the constitution will be read and adopted and the nominating program and final committee members selected. Those not already members are invited to come and join Wednesday at the Civic Club.

GIFTED READER GIVING BENEFIT

Nursery Home Secures Miss Katherine Fahnestock For Recital During Holidays

Many people of Harrisburg and vicinity who remember Miss Katherine V. Fahnestock as a child reader of more than ordinary ability, will be greatly interested in her appearance here, Tuesday evening, December 30, in recital in Fahnestock Hall for the benefit of the Nursery Home. She will be assisted by Miss Naomi Bevard, another talented local girl and former member of the Wednesday Club, who last year won the prize piano in a most difficult contest at the Boston Conservatory of Music, where she was a member of the graduating class.

Miss Fahnestock is at present in Junior Chautauqua work with the Chautauqua Association of Pennsylvania. For three summers and one winter she has been with the Association, appearing in practically all of the states between New Hampshire and the Carolinas as well as in Ohio and Ontario, around the Great Lakes. Her work consists of story telling, teaching folk dancing, and conducting a supervised play in an effort to wake up backward communities to the needs of organized play for children. She has also appeared in several recitals, including one in Philadelphia last spring.

Miss Fahnestock is well known in this city, where she began her professional career at the age of three. She was then reading James Whitcomb Riley's child poems. She continued to read throughout her primary and grammar school days, appearing in practically all of the churches of Harrisburg and vicinity as well as in many benefit entertainments. In High School, she won the Junior Girls' Declamation Contest, took the principal role in the class play of 1915, and graduated with honors.

She also attended Swarthmore College where she was the first freshman in many years to win the second prize in the Extemporaneous Speaking Contest, winning the first prize in the same contest her Junior year. She participated in the Declamation Contest, her Junior and senior years, and was the only girl admitted to the Senior Oratorical Contest when she gave an original oration. Miss Fahnestock was most active in every branch of school activities, being a member of the "Haley Staff", president of the Y. W. C. A., captain of the swimming team, and a winner of an athletic sweater for having been on six varsity athletic teams. She also took part in the college plays each year during her college career, taking the leading part in "The Shrine That Danced" and playing Martha Washington in Percy Mackaye's "Washington."

A press notice following "The Shrine That Danced" said: "Miss Fahnestock, as the 'Columbine' was just as saucy, selfish, yet altogether lovable as a Columbine should be. Her portrayal of the part was artistic throughout." After "Washington" a notice read: "In intensely dramatic scenes between Martha and George—particularly the leave taking when George starts to war, Miss Fahnestock, as Martha, was at her best."

Miss Fahnestock's appearance here on December 30 will be her first formal appearance in Harrisburg since leaving the city over four years ago. Since that time she has specialized in reading and will undoubtedly give a most artistic program here. The entire proceeds will be devoted to the Nursery Home.

HOLIDAY DANCANT CARDS ARE OUT

Christmas Tea and Dance Promises to Be Well Attended by Young Folks

Numerous young people of Harrisburg are including in their Christmas preparations plans for attending the tea and dance in the Penn-Harris Hotel ballroom Christmas afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Indications are that the many friends who count on the holidays as the season for renewing old school acquaintances and friendships intend to make the tea dance the occasion for doing so this Christmas season.

The invitations for the event were issued Saturday and are now in the hands of the friends of the committee which includes Miss Dorothy Bothwell, Miss Mary Hutman, Reed McCarty and George Shreiner, Jr.

The approval of the tea dance idea among the coterie of young people who received invitations is widespread, as there was a decided sentiment in favor of some Christmas afternoon function that would furnish a pleasant entertainment for out-of-town Christmas guests.

Where Will a Dollar Go Farthest Today?

They show you a spot on the Potomac where tradition says George Washington flung a dollar across the river.

"But it's impossible," you say. "No one could throw a dollar so far."

"Ah, but a dollar went further in those days," is the reply.

Where will a dollar go farthest today in women's wearing apparel?

Well, I'm in the business and I'll tell you the sort of store I'd select.

I'd buy in a shop which carried only garments of good workmanship and sound fabrics. For I'd know that an extra few dollars on the original cost would mean many months' more wearing power.

I'd buy in a shop where my money would be returned with a smile in case I had any complaint.

I'd buy where I knew that I'd secure garments of good style for I confess that I wear clothes for their beauty as well as for their utility.

And I'd buy where I'd be sure the salespeople would really have my interests at heart in helping me make my selections and where I'd know their taste was dependable.

That's the kind of shop where your dollar will go farthest.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

A CERTAIN little actress, noted for her clever costumes, was in our city one day last week. In the course of a brief interview she suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, yes; I almost forgot to tell you how much I like your shops. I really do. Why, would you believe it? When I was here the last time, I purchased an evening gown at the Cloos Shop that I like better than many of my gowns purchased in the fashion centers of the country. Everyone says it is stunning—and I think so myself. This time I have not had an opportunity to do so much as peep in the door, but I expect to before I leave; it's such a delight to examine the lovely frocks."

Do you have on your Christmas list a person so discriminating as to be exceedingly difficult to please? Ten chances to one, you do, and the very thought of selecting a suitable gift distresses you considerably. You are particularly anxious in this case to show personality in your gift-giving. In fact, you simply must! Well, then, why not make your selection at the Saltzger Art and Antique Shop, 223 North Second street? Mr. Saltzger specializes in collecting things both unusual and rare and perhaps a pair of handkerchiefs with prisms or a convex mirror would be the very gift to give that hard-to-please friend. Or, again, a wonderful etching might solve the problem, to say nothing of an attractive fish bowl of wrought iron and Tiffany glass.

"CHRISTMAS gifts for men are the hardest things in the world to choose," remarked the sister of two big, husky college athletes several days ago. "Truly, I haven't the vaguest idea as to what to buy those brothers of mine," she continued mournfully, "one's choice is so limited." "Nonsense," I replied, "selecting gifts for men is the simplest matter possible if you only make it so. They are sure to be pleased with anything that is genuinely useful and good. Just come along with me and let me prove how easily your troubles can be ended." I added, leading her into McFall's store, where an attentive salesman showed her the wide variety of articles suitable for gifts for men. There were fur-lined gloves—in fact, gloves of all sorts; initialed handkerchiefs, silk shirts, reefers, neckwear and bathrobes, not to mention many other practical things.

"TRULY," complained a mother to me several days ago, "you would think that children have no place in the scheme of things, judging by the attitude of merchants and landlords. A child in an apartment house is almost unheard of, and, I declare, I believe that children's shoes are rapidly going out of vogue. Just yesterday I took Junior downtown for a new pair and in practically every store I entered I was informed that 'we don't carry children's shoes any more, Madam.'" When she had finished, I ventured to ask whether she had eventually found a shop where attention is paid to the shodding of small boys such as Junior. "Oh, yes," she replied, "I did. I took him to the Army and Navy Shoe Store, where I discovered a most complete line of shoes—just like Dad's—for the tiny tad."

NATURALLY, our thoughts for the next ten days will center around Christmas and Christmas gifts. For that reason I want to give you a list of interesting gift articles that were suggested to me by a recent visit to the French Shop. Among the many lovely things, I found exquisite Spanish gulfure and Chantilly evening scarfs, beautiful neckwear, silk and lisle hosiery, silk vests, satin camisoles, crepe de chine combinations, Philippine chemise and night robes, boudoir caps and slippers, velvet, leather and beadette handbags, leather purses, telephone girls, cretonne-covered boxes for bonbons or the dresser. Madras sets, centerpieces and rapiers, doll pictures that are different, Christmas cards, illuminated parchment texts, pin trays, narcissus bulbs, incense bowls and handkerchiefs.
