Tales of King Arthur Told to Girls and Boys

The Harrisburg Public Library will give to the boys and girls of the city a series of stories on "King Arthur, and his Knights of the Round Table," Sidney Lanier says. "Perhaps no boy will deny that to find the world still reading a book which was written over five hundred years ago is a very wonderful business. Nevertheless, the same qualities which made a manful fighter then, make one now: To speak the truth; to perform a promise to the uttermost; to treat high and low with courtesy; to maintain right and honesty."

For Mother's Christmas

Have you noticed how Dad or Mother sometimes entirely out of style, I know, but just the same, the old nursery rhyme is called to mind by the pleased expressions on the faces of gift-seekers in this most surprising shop. I only wish I could mention all the articles shown. That being impossible, I shall satisfy myself with a few, say, for instance, card-cases, book-ends, illuminated parchment mottoes, tea sets, vases, breakfast sets, electric boudoir lamps and all sorts of novelties imaginable.

Dance "No-nights."

This evening the students of the school will hold a Christmas dance at the school. Miss Alice Virginia Cooper is chairman of the general committee.

COLONIAL DAMES' CONTEST

Essays in the Colonial Dames' annual contest were submitted this morning to the judges by the committee by students of the Camp Curtin Junior High school. The committee for the Dauphin county committee, Colonial Dames of America, comprises Mrs. Mabel Cronise Jones, chairman; Miss Catherine Egle, Mrs. Robert Holmes and Mrs. Marlin E. Olmsted. The subject of this year's essay is "The Virgin at the Manger," meaning the city as it appeared in Colonial days before 1776 as contrasted to the Harrisburg of today.

Miss Pearl H. Kerns started for Chicago to-day expecting to remain there with friends for a fortnight. Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Hoffman went home to Pittsburgh this afternoon following a week's visit among relatives in this vicinity.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

LET'S? You find them by the hundreds at the Art and Gift Shop! Indeed—the store is so full of a number of things. "I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings." Happiness applied to kings is entirely out of style, I know, but just the same, the old nursery rhyme is called to mind by the pleased expressions on the faces of gift-seekers in this most surprising shop. I only wish I could mention all the articles shown. That being impossible, I shall satisfy myself with a few, say, for instance, card-cases, book-ends, illuminated parchment mottoes, tea sets, vases, breakfast sets, electric boudoir lamps and all sorts of novelties imaginable.

ONLY five more days 'til Christmas and still no gift for that discriminating friend. Well, perhaps I can help you. Just let me think, Oh, I know just the very thing—a lovely Italian plaque. Mr. Saltzger has a choice selection recently received from abroad. Or, if that is not exactly what you want, how would artistic altar candle sticks do instead? Then too, I might suggest your photograph or better still a visit to the Saltzger Art and Antique Store where the gift that is "different" can always be found.

DEAR ME, what a good time Old Santa Claus must have! And how well he stocks his many branch houses! Take, for example, the Marianne Toy Shop, on Locust street. One wonders how he ever thinks of the never-ending variety of gifts he shows us there. Wise old fellow that he is, he has remembered everyone from the baby to the big growing boy. For the latter, there are miniature chemical sets—perfectly safe, of course—with test tubes, chemicals and ever litmus paper. For little girls there are "Little One's Baking Sets," with tiny bags of salt and flour, a box of baking powder and all necessary articles, including a baking book and rolling. In addition there are hundreds of things that simply can't be mentioned here for lack of space.

"THERE'S just one thing I want for Christmas," declared a pretty young Miss several days ago.
 "And what is that?" I ventured to inquire.
 "A Louis neckpiece," she promptly replied.
 "A Louis neckpiece?" I repeated, thoroughly mystified.
 "Yes," she explained, "A neckpiece made by Louis, the Ladies Tailor."
 "Oh," I laughed, "I thought perhaps you were speaking of a new sort of fur. But why so particular that it should come from Louis' shop?"
 "Because," she replied, "I know it's sure to be genuine then."
 "Not such a bad reason, is it?"

I wish I knew the reason why so many women finding buying gifts for men such a difficult task. It seems almost amusing considering the many possibilities from which they have to choose. In fact, in the Army and Navy Shoe Store alone there are enough suggestions from which to make a choice for almost any man. First in the list comes big, warm gloves followed closely by hostess of all sorts—including the heavy woolen variety—bedroom slippers, and shoes, shoes, shoes! That growing lad, in addition to his less useful gifts, would surely appreciate a pair of heavy shoes for school, the kind that all boys love to wear this snowy weather.

I OVERHEARD a conversation in the "movies" several days ago that amused me considerably. Three men in the seats back of mine were discussing Christmas gifts. "What do you suppose your wife will give you, Bob?" inquired the first. "I'll never tell you," answered the one addressed as Bob, "but I wager it will be a gift worth receiving. You see, it's this way: About a week ago she began 'pumping' to find what I wanted. Well, since she asked, I told her. That is, I didn't exactly designate the article, but I did most factually state that McFall's are showing the best line ever of bathrobes, neckties, reefers and gloves. I guess I mentioned intimated handkerchiefs, too. And, believe me, boys, I hope she takes the hint, for you can't beat McFall's for quality."

This Customer Came 100 Miles to Buy at My Shop.

And she lives in a fashionable suburb of a great city many times larger than Harrisburg. The other day she walked into my shop; purchased a winter wardrobe and announced upon leaving that she'd return within three months for her Spring outfit. She became interested in my place through the enthusiastic praise of a Harrisburg customer.

Now what influenced this woman! I think there were two reasons. One is that my operating expense is so low that I can give better values than she can secure in her own city. She was shrewd enough to figure this out for herself. And the other, she frankly told me, was the care and discrimination my girls display in helping customers make their selections; and about which she had been told.

Anyway, it surely reflects credit upon Harrisburg — doesn't it? — that it can draw business from a hundred miles away.
