DR. J. H. KREIDER Dr. J. H. Kreider, 1410 Derry street, has resumed practice, having returned from service in the United States Army.—Adv.

ARMY habits are hard to discard and one of the most difficult to lose is that of wearing comfortable Army shirts. Since portions of their uniforms, particularly their shirts and shoes. In many instances, however, they are rapidly wearing out and the question of how and where to replace them is frequently arising. The man who works in the open is particularly anxious to replenish his supply but is often at a loss to know where to go. That is because he has never been told that the Army and Navy Shoe Store, in Court Street, not only carries Army shoes but Army shirts as well. Naturally the quality is the very best which means they will give excellent service.

Informal, holiday events were arranged simply as an excuse for Milady to look her best in a stunning Christmas Day New dancer. Several of the most attractive frocks came from the Cloos Shop. I know, for I saw them there myself. Already this progressive store is showing a large number of advance models all boasting the season's most popular whim—the abbreviated sleeve. A particularly fetching one of black charmeuse flaunts numerous plaited frills and touches of narrow rose ribbon. Another of my favorites with graceful folds in blue white a third of similar material, with skirt of three tier effect, is brightened with embroidery.

ENTER the advance Spring styles, with a chic Polish effect leading the procession. Not only chic, but clever, it captivates the eye, giving promise of being a popular favorite in the world of smart garments. Competing with it for attention is the leather trimmed suit sponsored by Paris, the mother of fashions. These, with many other lovely models, Louis, the Ladies Tailor, is ready to make of beautiful serges and tricotines. Particularly effective are the fabrics of white when made up into stunning tailored garments by his clever fingers. But perhaps it is furs, not suits, you are seeking. Well—you'll find them at Lou's, too. If you're passing down the street near State, drop into his shop and inspect his assortment of skins and of neckpieces. Only be prepared for a shock when it comes to the price. They are so very reasonable as to startle anyone these days of exorbitant demands.

Fritz Kreisler Will Be Here January 5

FRITZ KREISLER

Harrisburg is to be favored with a concert by the peerless violinist, Fritz Kreisler, on the evening of January 5 in Chestnut Street Auditorium. This concert has been endorsed by the Rotary Club of this city, also by Mayor Keister, and State Adjutant General Beary.

At a recent concert in Philadelphia at which Mr. Kreisler was soloist his reception was so great he was so overcome with emotion that it was with difficulty he was able to start his program. At the conclusion of the program some one said to him "you certainly can have no doubt the place you hold in the heart of musical Philadelphia." In reply Mr. Kreisler said, "It has been wonderful. I try to let my violin say my thanks for me. That is the way I prefer to express my gratitude." The account of the concert says, "he never played with more vital force or emotional sincerity, one could not help feeling that some other players are little boys beside him. This was a man grown with a message as profound as human life."

Tickets are now on sale at Slinger's Music House, 30 North Second street.

Pittsburgh Seeks to Dispose of 40,000 Trees

By Associated Press Pittsburgh, Dec. 27.—Pittsburgh produce men are seeking ways and means to dispose of some 40,000 Christmas trees left unsold on the market without destroying them. Fifty carloads of trees remain in the produce yards awaiting disposition.

Eighteen carloads were taken to a dump yesterday and thrown away, while many other trees were hauled away by the truckload for social clubs of the city to use for decorating at New Year functions. Cemeteries have come in for their share of trees also, where the branches have been cut and placed upon graves. The ubiquitous small boy has done service in hauling away bundles of trees for his use.

In spite of the heavy demand for Christmas trees this season the market was overestimated and dealers stand to lose $25,000, one wholesaler said.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

IS it a dainty dress for baby that you're searching? Yes? Then save both time and energy by going first of all to the Art and Gift Shop, 105 N. Second Street. It's a plain case of "Eventually, why not now?" for you'll surely make your selection there in the end. If you love sheer, hand-made baby things, and, of course, you do, you'll delight in the display of attractive, little articles just arrived. Soft, pretty, hand-made dresses, bibs and Princess slips are among the lot, some already made up and embroidered, others simply stamped. Any baby, no matter how sweet and lovely, would look just a wee bit dearer and prettier when wearing one of these little dresses designed by artists who devote all their time and efforts to evolving the loveliest baby things possible.

ABOUT two years ago I was visiting a friend in a suburb of Pittsburgh whose home was a constant delight to the eye. The decorating had been done by a famous New York firm and no effort had been spared to fill the rooms with rare bits of tapestry and lovely furniture. One piece of which my hostess was particularly fond was a beautiful black front low-boy of the Chippendale period and the beauty of her enthralment and partly because the piece was so exceptionally good in every respect, I, too, became very fond of it. Since that time, I have seen numerous low-boys but none that, in my estimation, could compare with that particular one. Yesterday, however, I walked into Saltzger's Art and Antique Store, and to my joy discovered one almost identically like it. If you are interested in low-boys, see it, by all means.
