The Landlord's Joke. Not far from the city of Montgomery, in the State of Alabama, on one of the old stage roads running from that city, lived a jolly landlord by the name of Ford.

"Burder and Yancy and Elmore, from Montgomery," was the answer, "on our way to Tuscaloosa, to attend Court. We are benighted, and want to stay all night."

"Very sorry I can't accommodate you, so far, gentlemen. Do anything to oblige you, but that's impossible."

"Well, can you stable our horses and give us chairs and a good fire for morning?" "O, yes; can do that, gentlemen."

"You didn't say so," replied Ford. "You didn't? What in the name of wonder, then, did you say?"

"You asked me to let you stay all night," and I said that would be impossible, for the night was tight upon two-thirds gone when you came. If you only wanted beds, why on earth didn't you say so?"

"The lawyers had to give it up. Three lawyers on one side, and the landlord had beat them all!"

"Oh," said the member from the Pine Tree State, "I was well pleased with it, because it was so true," and this was said with the utmost solemnity of tone and gravity of manner.

"So true, so true," said Mr. S., "what do you mean, sir?" "I knew a Yankee that did that, once," was the reply.

"And what was his name?" Mr. Spurgeon asked, to which Yankee answered-- "The name, sir, was George Washington; perhaps you have heard of him?"
