

UNION COUNTY STAR LEWISBURG CHRONICLE.

BY O. N. WORDEN AND J. R. CORNELIUS.
At $1.50 per Year, always in Advance.

LEWISBURG, UNION CO., PA., FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1859.

THE UNION—ESTABLISHED, 1814—WHOLE NO., 2,366.
CHRONICLE—ESTABLISHED, 1843—WHOLE NO., 791.

Union County Star & Lewisburg Chronicle

AN INDEPENDENT PAPER, PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

Issued Friday, at Lewisburg, Union Co., Pa.

TERMS.—$1.50 per year in advance, and at the same rate for a longer or shorter period. This paper is published weekly, except on Sundays, and is sent to subscribers by mail, postage paid. Single copies are sold for five cents. Advertising rates are as follows: For one square, containing ten lines, for the first week, $1.00; for the second week, 75 cents; for the third week, 50 cents; for the fourth week, 25 cents; for the fifth week, 12 cents; for the sixth week, 10 cents; for the seventh week, 8 cents; for the eighth week, 6 cents; for the ninth week, 4 cents; for the tenth week, 3 cents; for the eleventh week, 2 cents; for the twelfth week, 1 cent. For longer advertisements, the rates are proportionally increased. For a full and complete list of advertising rates, apply to the publisher, O. N. Worden, at Lewisburg, Pa.

The Star and Chronicle.
MONDAY, JUNE 27, 1859.

"Spare that Bird!"

Special laws have recently been passed, to prevent the wanton destruction of winged insect-levourers, and there are general statutes against cruelty to animals. But there is one suffering member of the brute creation, whose case is not met by any existing law, and whose cause we plead. It is the Agouti of the Romans—the Eagle of the Universal Yankee Nation. He is styled, in books, the King of Birds, and is a lazy, rapacious, predatory, fish-robbing, worthless thing—so honor to Kings in his being named after them. Why he was chosen to blazon the banners of the pure Republic or Democratic Americans, we will not attempt to investigate; perhaps his "habits" and ones are very similar, even though he be a King and we hate all Kings!

But having adopted the Eagle as our Patron Saint, it behoves us to take good care of him, and preserve him not only against foreign foes, but also against excess of kindness at home—the latter quite as "killing" as the former. For many years past, the grossest exactions have been made of him, and the most cruel punishments inflicted, in the great National Circus on the Fourth of July. Ten thousand fervid orators have commanded him to stand with one leg on the Alleghenies and the other on the Rocky Mountains—one wing fanning the Atlantic and the other the Pacific—his head engaged in picking up whales from the North Pole, and his tail hovering threateningly over Cuba. To stand there for hours, just to amuse wondering, open-mouthed auditors, is awful hard work. Alas! such a stretch of legs and of imagination far exceeds anything in the Ornithological line we have yet found in the Pacific Railroad Survey. Said American Eagle is also trained to eat up a British Lion at one meal. And by his horrid noise to scare away all the despots from Central America. And to make his cry on Chimborazo. Like in the dark empyrean—But we indignantly declare that Lion is too strong food for his delicate taste, and that Chimborazo is too cold a sleeping place. These valiant deeds are leg-and-wing wearying and stomach-cloying to the Eagle—in fact, far beyond his capacity. Such exploits ought never to be required of him, even in figures of speech for Buncombe county.

Next Monday, we fear, our Bird will be caricatured by excess of glorifying, commanded to perform all manner of silliness, and so flattered as completely to turn his head if any brains were in it. His all-overshadowing protection will be required to cement our gelatinous Union, even as a setting hen is coaxed to spread herself over an exceedingly big nest, and hatch all manner of eggs put under her. He will be expected to atone by his renown for every National crime, wink at every sin, and conceal, palliate, or justify every folly and weakness of our people. His long talons will be stretched out to rend assunder all creation and the rest of mankind who should stand in the way of our fillibusters, and his sharp beak must be whetted on the tombstone of every people who dare "say boo" to Uncle Samuel. All the world will be dared to pluck a single pin-feather from his tail, or to deny that he surpasses the dove in gentleness, and the bird of paradise in beauty. Now this is all very nauseating—very pernicious. We beg every speaker, and reader, and toast-maker, the coming Fourth, not to touch the Eagle. Let him have one Anniversary of Independence unmolested by man or beast—editor, politician, orator, poet, or school boy.

Spencer, spare that Bird!
Give him a holiday!
Liberate him from his boastful word,
But let him muse or play.
You've used him all in days gone by,
He's done much nonsense work,
Now let him seek his tree-top high
As sleepy as a Turk.
O, then with fustiness shall he shine,
"Huck" chickens, mice or fish,
And "hook" for glory" you require
To catch him at your wish!

—In the mean time, to show that the Eagle is willing to do anything reasonable while stimulating the National vanity (by displaying the pomp of his Imperial iveness, we copy the following, his LAST SPEECH:

OUR COUNTRY.

By EDWARD EGLE, Esq., of the Southern Mercury.

There's not the least shadow of a doubt about the matter—ours is, emphatically, undeniably, incontrovertibly, positively, comparatively, and superlatively, a great and glorious country. The annals of time furnish nothing to compare with it. Greece wasn't a circumstance. Rome was nowher. Venice couldn't hold us a candle; while all modern nations sink into insignificance before our country. It has longer rivers, and more of them, muddier and deeper, and they run faster, and go farther, and make more noise, and rise higher, and fall lower, than anybody else's rivers. It has more lakes, and they are bigger, and deeper, and clearer, than those of any other nation. It has more cataraets, and they fall further, and faster, and harder, and roar louder, and look grander, than all other cataraets. It has more mountains, and higher ones, and more snow on 'em, and they are harder to get up, and easier to fall down, than all other mountains. It has more gold, and it is heavier, and brighter, and worth more than the gold of other countries. Our rail cars are bigger, and run faster, and pitch off the track oftener, and kill more people, than all other rail cars. Our steamboats are longer, and carry bigger loads, and "bilo busters" oftener, and the captains swear harder, than any other country. Our men are bigger, and longer, and higher, and thicker, and can fight harder and faster, and can drink more whiskey, chew more tobacco, spit more and further, stick up their heels higher, and do anything else more, and better, and oftener, than men in all other countries combined. Our ladies are prettier, dress finer, spend more money, break more hearts, wear bigger hoops and shorter dresses, and kick up the devil generally, to a greater extent than all other ladies. Our politicians can shout louder, and lie harder, make gas faster, dodge quicker, turn oftener, make more noise, and do less work, than everybody else's politicians. Our niggers are blacker, work harder, have thicker skulls, smell louder, and need thrashing oftener, than other niggers. Our children squall louder, grow faster, and get too big for their trousers quicker, than all other children.

It is a great country! It is the corner stone of nations, it is the top of the pile, the head man of the heap, the last button on the coat, the crowning jewel in the diadem, the capital of the column, the last link in the chain, the observed of all observers. It will eat up all others faster than Pharaoh's lean kine ate up the fat ones. When all other nations are numbered among the things that were, it will just be rejoicing in its strength. It will kick all other nations out of existence; it will liek them up as the cow lieketh up salt. It has now thirty-three States, and more a-comin'. It covers more territory than all other nations. And finally, it has louder thunder, faster lightning, bigger hail, and colder ice, than can be found in any other part of the habitable globe. Hurrah for this prodigious constellation of free States! Hang a man that won't praise his own country!

The Allied Plans before Magenta.

[A writer in Paris, speaking of the battle, says:]

If we go back to the events which preceded the battle of Magenta, we shall find ample material for admiring the maiden generalship of Louis Napoleon. His long delay at Alessandria was to collect and organize perfectly his army, so that, notwithstanding its great bulk, it could be moved rapidly in any required direction; moreover, by collecting his army there, and sending, in the direction of Montebello and Casteggio, strong advanced posts, he constantly maintained the idea in the Austrian camp that he was going to attempt to cross the river into Lombardy, below Pavia. The sequel proves that the Austrians regarded this as the probable point at which Napoleon would attempt to cross.

On the 30th of May, the Emperor Napoleon, with his whole army, commenced moving to the north, stopping first at Casale. Thus far, the Austrians had no reason to believe that the plan of campaign had been changed, for they could not tell whether this movement was a ruse or not, and so they waited. General Niel, however, as well as Baraguay D'Hilliers, had disappeared suddenly, and as far as the first was concerned, no trace of him could be found by the Austrians, until he suddenly fell on Novara, and took the place, much to their surprise; for they retreated precipitately scarcely firing a gun.

On the 1st of June, the Emperor had formed his junction with the King, still further north, at Verceil. The 2d of June, their Majesties were at Novara, still further north, with the bulk of the combined armies. It was now evident to the Austrians that the French were aiming for the bridge of Buffalora, on the direct road from Novara to Milan, and they commenced, too late, as usual, to recross the Ticino, and rush up, on the Lombard side of the river, to intercept the crossing at Buffalora. Napoleon, in order once more to deceive them as to his real designs, made a feint to cross the bridge of Magenta, and then ordered the corps of General Niel to cross the bridge of Tubigo, which he did on the 3d of June, Friday. A smart conflict ensued on the soil of Lombardy, in which the French loss was 40 killed and wounded, the Austrian something more than the field. During this time, the Emperor and King were preparing to march the Imperial Guard and the great body of the combined army over the bridge of Magenta, an operation which was commenced during Friday night and Saturday morning, but which was not entirely terminated at the time the great battle of Magenta was fought, on Saturday afternoon.

Here, then, we see that the Austrians have not only been out-generated, but they have been beaten on their own soil, and in all probability by inferior numbers. While they were preparing to defend the river at Pavia and Placenza, the Emperor was arranging his plans for crossing far away to the north at Novara. The moving of this immense army from Alessandria and Montebello to Novara in four days, with all its stores, artillery and material, in such perfect order as to be prepared at any part of its march for a grand pitched battle, was a feat which does the highest honor to the military skill of Louis Napoleon and his generals. For, while it was passing north, it must be recollected, it was moving along in sight almost of that part of the Austrian army still posted in the Piedmontese territory, on the line from Gariasco north to Novara.

The King's crossing of the Sesia at Palestro, with the occupation of that place, seconded very materially the movements of the French army on Novara, and the general plan for the crossing at Buffalora. It was a part of the ruse, and contributed very materially to its success. Thus the three first days of June give us the scene of two immense armies, one on each side of a river, rushing up that river to a certain point where one wishes to pass and the other wishes to prevent the passage. The invading army arrives first, effects its passage, and is caught only at a distance of two miles from the river, when all the advantages of an attack during the crossing have been lost. Much bloodshed was thus saved to the invading army, for at any point lower down on the river a crossing could only have been effected with great loss of men.

The Zouaves and the Turcos.

The newspapers, correspondents from Italy, and Paris story tellers give us all sorts of reports and anecdotes about the Zouaves, the Turcos, and other new species of troops now in Italy. The Zouaves at Palestro, they tell us, got their bagged trousers legs so wet, and therefore so heavy, in crossing some lands, that when ordered to the charge, they cast off their trousers, and ran at the Austrians, bayonet in hand, bare-legged! The corps has been so wild, it is also added, and so little regardful of mum and team, that the Emperor summoned a certain number of them, and told them he would order them back to Africa and ran at the Austrians, bayonet in hand, bare-legged! The corps has been so wild, it is also added, and so little regardful of mum and team, that the Emperor summoned a certain number of them, and told them he would order them back to Africa and ran at the Austrians, bayonet in hand, bare-legged!

The Allied Plans before Magenta.

The Turcos are a new race of men on the European field of battle, or at least, not there seen or known since the days of Hannibal, who led their ancestors into Italy. They are Mohammedans under French officers, and sub-officers, natives of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle, in the correspondence of the Constitutionnel, from Novara, June 4th. McMahon's division is made up of these troops and others from Africa. The correspondent had then just heard of this division at Magenta, where they attacked the Austrians protected by their cannon. "Like tigers" (says the writer) they precipitated themselves upon the Austrians, crying "victory," even before they had discharged their guns. The attack is said to have exhibited one of the strangest and most terrible aspects of war. The Turcos threw themselves upon the enemy like the savages of Africa, about Algiers, black or woolly haired. We have to-day the first account from them on the field of battle