A Speech taking Wings.

[At the recent session of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church at Indianapolis, there was a very able discussion of the Seminary question. Among the speakers was the well known Dr. M'Master. He spoke from his notes, and as he proceeded with page after page, he handed his manuscript to the reporter of the Cincinnati Gazette, who was at the table near him. The last scene was so amusing, that we give it in the words of the reporter himself:]

When Dr. M'Master made his great speech on the Seminary question in the Presbyterian General Assembly at Indianapolis, on Monday afternoon, the reporter of the Gazette made arrangements to get his manuscript as fast as he read it, in order to send it to Cincinnati. The Doctor laid the sheets on the table before him, as he finished reading them, and occasionally would pass some over with "Here, Mr. Reporter." At ten minutes to five (the hour the train leaves) there was quite a pile lying there, but the reporter did not like to take them without saying "By your leave." He waited for the Doctor to pause, till he dared not wait any longer. It was already five minutes to five, so he seized the pile of manuscript and started.

Shortly after, the Doctor came to "Sixthly," "Where's my sixthly?" said he. He turned over his manuscript, but no sixthly. At last, with a perplexed expression on his simple, child-like face, (for though a very large man, with a venerable white head, he has a face mounted on his big body more child-like than that of Horace Greeley,) the Doctor said, "I wonder if that reporter has carried off my sixthly?"

It was even so. "Sixthly" was already on the train, bound for Cincinnati, and just as the Doctor discovered the fact, the whistle of the departed train sounded, seeming to say, "Got your sp-ee-ch, sp-ee-ch, sp-ee-ch." "Got your sp-ee-ch, sp-ee-ch." The Assembly was convulsed with laughter.

A Cheese Story.

One night in Autumn, two travelers, whose homes where among the green hills of Vermont, stopped at a small country tavern in New Hampshire. During the evening, one of them got to talking with a farmer of the place upon farming matters generally and the relative agricultural advantages of Vermont and New Hampshire particularly. The farmer, as might be supposed, maintained the superiority of his own State, New Hampshire; and to prove it, told how much butter and cheese his wife had made that season. Not so much to show the excellent laboring capacity of his wife, be added, by way of explanation, did he make this statement, as to prove how much greater in quantity was the milk of cows fed on New Hampshire grass, than that of those that grazed elsewhere.

"Well," said the traveler, "that's nothing to what they do in Vermont. Why one man up there made thirty tons of cheese last summer, and he was a small farmer, too."

"I guess you have set that a little too high," said the farmer, unwilling to concede that there was a better farmer in Vermont than himself.

"Didn't Jim Maynard make thirty tons of cheese last summer, Tom?" asked the traveler of his companion.

"I don't know how much cheese he made," replied the other, with gravity, "but I remember that he ran two sawmills with the whey!"

The farmer "caved," and acknowledged that such farming as that could not be excelled.

GREELEY MEETS A SLAVE DEALER.—We find the following going the rounds of the western journals:

"Horace Greely met at Leavenworth a gentleman who expressed great pleasure at seeing so distinguished a philanthropist, and in wishing him success. "Indeed," replied Mr. Greeley, "I am happy to hear such sentiments, and to see such men as yourself, where I did not expect the least sympathy, in this land where the iniquity of the nation is so firmly rooted. God be praised, the work goes heavely on." "With your aid," returned Mr. W., "slavery will soon cease to exist in Missouri. The number of slaves is now fast decreasing. I am myself doing something towards removing them. Only last week I took away thirteen." "My good friend, how? where to?" "To New Orleans." "Great God! a dealer in human souls!" "Yes, sir, if that is what you call it. I buy and sell negroes. I am indebted to you for the profits of my business. Slaveholders here sell me their slaves for half their value in the South, to keep your disciples from stealing them."

The New York Herald admits that the Democratic party is weak, and advises it to take refuge in the impregnable strength of the administration! This is like the boy who was named John, but for shortness they called him Jonathan!

Instead of retaliating upon the man who calls you a villain, a liar, or a thief, coolly inform him that you have not sufficient confidence in his veracity to believe him.

An editor is charged with grossly misrepresenting the condition of the streets. One would think that an editor had better almost do anything else than lie about the streets.

A physician had a brother who was a jeweler, but the jeweler had no brother who was a physician. How was that? (Prize the physician was a female.)

Philadelphia,

Have now on hand a large assortment of Fire Proof Salamander Safes and Iron Doors for Brick and Stone Buildings, Iron Safes, all kinds of Locks, and Iron in Bars, &c., for sale at the lowest prices.

☞ Five Safes in one Fire—all come out right with contents in good condition. ☜

Are Guaranteed by Sixty of Philadelphia against the World!

EVANS & WATSON

Have had the most conclusive demonstration in the following certificate, that their Salamander Safes are the best in the world. The Safe referred to was exposed to the hottest fire in the late conflagration on Dock street, and was taken out in the midst of the ruins, red hot, and remained in that condition for several hours, and when cool enough to be opened, the contents were found perfectly preserved.

PHILAD., April 22, 1858.

Messrs. Evans & Watson—Gentlemen: Herewith we hand you the certificate of the Committee appointed by the Underwriters' Association to visit the ruins of the late fire, and examine the Safes which were recovered from the fire. In accordance with the request of your agent, we have examined the Safe which you sold to Mr. Thomas Potts, and found the contents in perfect order. The Safe was in the store of the late firm of Potts & Thomas, on the morning of the 11th inst.

When we inform you that these Safes were located in the front store of the building, we consider, and that they were exposed to a heap of burning ruins, where the roof remained for at least one hour after the Safes were found, we can but regard the preservation of their contents as a most convincing proof of the great merits of the Safes offered for sale by you.

We shall take much pleasure in recommending them to those of business men who are quite welcome against fire.
