Address of the Carrier

Star & Chronicle

Patrons and Friends! one more short year has run its checkered round Since I, your humble servant, on my annual errand bound, Endeavored to address you, in my rambling, uncouth way, Upon th' important topics which appeared to have the sway. Tis true, my rhymes are faulty, for a poet I am not, But remember I'm the CARRIER, and no Sir Walter Scott!

During the twelve mouths that have passed, we have accomplished mucl Though times are hard, they can not kill the Pennsylvania Dutch. We're well aware that poverty is not the worst of crimes, And Lewisburg will drive ahead though scarce may be the dimes. Our citizens have paved their streets, and built up houses neat-Work serves to drive the blues away, and keep the temper sweet-While many of our neighbors, who perhaps command more dollars, With hands thrust in their pockets, and their chins upon their collars, Go moping indolently 'round, raising a dismal howl About "bad luck"-Lord bless 'em! it won't help the thing to grow!!

We have enjoyed, through Fifty-Nine, the bliss of general health, A boon which may be had with care, but can't be bought with wealth, And for this gift our humblest thanks should rise and hearts should swell To the great "Giver of good gifts," "who doeth all things well;" For, O, what is this world, with all its boasted charms, to those Who're racked by sickness from their birth until their day shall close?

Our farmers have been favored with an overwhelming crop, The source of all prosperity, and our loved country's hope; Our valleys, we may say with trath, o'erflow with "milk and honey," And granaries teeming with such stores are better than the money.

Abread, from Russia's snows to Italia's fair but oft-contested vales, Slowly drop the chains of serfdom, and hope of Progress now prevails. Hail, Freedom's trend majestic, as it surely marches on! The bright-rayed morn of Liberty is destined soon to dawn; She gathers strength from failure, but her pure and spotless wing Shall oversholow our wide earth, and all with joy shall sing; Nor will the People step-though despots no foul invectives spare-Until her layored sons hall fill in each hand the highest chair.

Science and art and enterprise have taxed their busy minds In planning steamers proof against the war of waves and winds; John Bull at hat has made a ship to suit his own odd notion, And named it the "Great Eastern"-'tis the big-bug of the ocean; It may seem strange to inland boatmen, yet this monster "smack" Could sail around the world with thrice our people on her back ! But (like the Atlantic Telegraph last year I puffed up so,) This huge Brobdiguagian canal-beat don't appear to 60-Like the man who won the Elephant in an old-country raffle, "I" To make it PAY" seems Britain's wise heads entirely to baffle.

Great times they've had "'way down in old Virgini y never tire," The land of treason-hangers, fuss, heaxed Governors, and fire-The world might think the other States acknowledged her as t With Wise her pontifex in chief, and Uncle Sam his brother; With Wise her pontiex in cases, and To hang a few misguided men, for doing what they thought Was service to humanity, (though clearly it was not,) The whole United States was ransacked by this son of Mars, Who thought that he would fright them by a look at his huzzars. Ah! Brown and Cook! when you pendered o'er the motto of that State ("Sie semper tyrannis,") you thought tyrants met a dreaded fate; But, see! that short quotation a different idea screens-"Sie semper abolitionists and cours" is what it truly means.

-Time was, when men were laid away beneath the clods and stones, That e'en their fiercest enemies stopped wrangling o'er their bones; But Slaveocrats continue to pour their wrath on Old Brown's head-("De mortuis nihil nisi bonum") as if he were not dead!

Hark! from our Congress Halls, the wild Disunion breath-The Despots shout not Victory, but sing the wail of Death!

If South Carolinians want to, let them go on and secede-Pack up their traps and niggers, and be off with all their speed; And should they take to water to reach some hotter clime, I think they'd better charter the Great Eastern for the time-Attach a hempen cord from State to craft, fire up and start, One long, strong pull, each rebel limb would take from the loyal heart-Then sail where "North Star" never shines-equality's ne'er taught-Where slaves are as thick as hail, and can be had for nought. Let Fillibusters follow, then, upon a cotton raft, or First take the "chivalry" aboard, and tow their darkies after: And when the steamer leaves the fire-eaters to their own control, We hope that she'll come back again and take away the hole!

Will cling unto the Union our honored fathers won : Freed Kansas soon shall add her chorus to our song, And, "Westward," Freedom's children still becken us along. In Fifty-Nine, from orient Maine to farthest Iowa State after State has swelled the Republican array. In Sixty, with Seward wise, or Cameron strong, or Chase or Bates, Or Fremont the Pathfinder of the broad Pacific States, Or Lincoln frank, or Judge M'Lean, Cassius Clay, or Banks, Or Dayton true and tried, let's close our patriotic ranks-With prudence and with patience, with energy and trust, The votes of Freemen's sons shall smite the Traitors to the dust, Fair shall float the banner-"Liberty and Union, now and ever! Palsied be the wicked hands those sacred words would sever!"

But every true American-native, or adopted son-

While the shrill blasts of Boreas sing a mournful overture About our well-warmed tenements, do not neglect the poor, Relieve the tender innocents, though their parent's evil deeds Brought them to poverty and rags-'tis love, 'tis mercy pleads, "The poor are always with us"-don't pass them with a nod, And runmage all the footstool to find suffering abroad.

Welcome, then, the coming year! May prosperity increase, Your Star shine serenely bright, and we Chronicle your peace; May health prevail in every house-no sorrows e'er annoy-These are the fervent wishes of your faithful CARRIER BOY. ASSIGNEE'S NOTICE.

TO all whom this may concern: On the sixth day of December, A.
