A Slave Sells his Master. Mathew Hobson (generally called "Black Matt" on account of the darkness of his complexion.) was well known by the inhabitants of the seaboard of Virginia, some years ago, as a slave dealer, and an accomplished "breaker-in" of bad firsh. He once purchased a bright mulatto, by the name of Sam, at a very low price, on account of his numerous bad qualities, such as thieving, lying and drunkenness. Sam was intelligent, with all his faults-could read and write, and ape the airs of a polished gentleman. He was so far removed, too, from the pure African, that he could scarcely be distinguished from a white man. On his becoming the property of the slave-dealer, he received several severe admonitions, in order that he might have a foretaste of the temper of his master. Secretly, he vowed vengeance for these "striking proofs" of affection, and in a short time an opportunity offered to gratify that vengeance. Matt made up his gang, and shipped

them at Norfolk. The barque arrived safely at New Orleans, and was brought to the wharf. In order that Sam might bring a good price, he was togged off in STEREOSCOPIC EMPORIUM fine clothes-calf-skin boots, a silk hat, ly allowed to go on shore, in order to show himself off. He proceeded to the Al-hambra, and strutted about among the best of them. Hearing a portly gentle.

"Ila," rejoined the planter, "I am glad

"Ha," rejoined the planter, "I am glad to bear you say so, for I have been look ing for one for several days. What do you sak for him?"
"Nine huudred dollars," replied Sam, "and cheap enough at that. He has every quality—can shave, dress hair, brush boots, and is, besides, polished in his manners. I could have got fifteen hundred dollars for him, but for one fault."
"Ha," ejaculated the planter, "and pray what kind of fault is that?"
"Why, sir, a ridiculous one—be imagines himself a white man."
"A white man !" exclaimed the planter, live planter, "and pray what kind of fault is that?"
"A white man !" exclaimed the planter, live planter, and being and/ourse for the source of the Soure of the Soure laughing-"that is a funny conceit. I've had considerable experience in training and managing gentlemen of color." "Oh, sir," continued Sam, "there is but little doubt that be can be cured—tho you may find some trouble, at first."

"Well, sir, you appear to be a gentleman," said the planter, who was rather too anxious and confiding. "I will take him at your recommendation. Where is be, now ?"

"On board the barque -----, yonder, at the wharf; you can see him at any moment."

"Good !" exclaimed the planter, "I am much pleased with your honesty and candor. and in order to save time bere are your nine bundred dollars-please give Books, Magazines, Pamphlets, Music, me a bill of sale."

It is not unfrequently the case that persons are attacked with disease, and before medical aid can be procured, the patient is beyond the hope of recovery. Captains of vessels should always supply themselves with a few bottles of this remedy before leaving port, as by so doing they will always be in possession of an invaluable remedy to resort to in cases of accidents and sudden attacks of sickness. "Are you Black Matt, my fine fellow ?" asked the planter, addressing the slave merchant.

"Folks call me so at hum," was the reply, "but here my name's Matthew Hobson. What do you want?"

"I'll tell you, Matt, what I want-I want you. You're a likely looking fellow, and will just suit me."

"Look here, stranger !" said Matt, firing up, "may be you dou't know who you're speaking to."

"Yes I do, though-you're my property; I bought you of your master, Samuel Hopkins, just now, and-"

"You bought me !" exclaimed Matt, standing up at full length before the planter : "bell and the devil, sir-I'm a white man !"

"Come, come, now," calmly said the fat man, "it wont do-- I know you--you can't humbug me with your conceits--I'll whip it out of you, sir--I'll teach you-"

Here Matt drew back and aimed a blow at the ruddy nose of the planter, who seized him by the throat, and bellowed for the police. An officer happened to be on the levec-be, at the instance of the planter, seized the "refractory slave," and bore him to the calaboose, where he remained until evidence could be procured identifying him as a free-born white citizen of the United States !

Sam, in the meantime, got on board a ship that was just weighing anchor for a European port, and has never been heard of since. Thus he had his revenge. Matt lost his slave, and the "green" fat gentleman lost his money.
