A VANKEE IN THE PASSENGER CAR. One day last week, when in a car

I saw a Yankee, who, for wit,

I think was born to shine. Nine men had seats, and twelve were filled By women six, not fair— The men made room, the Yankee took The only seat to spare.

I knew he was a Yankee, by The shrewdness of his look, And by the off-hand, easy way, With which his seat he took. A dashing female, gaily dressed,

On monstrous hoops, no one could beat, Her satin skirts were spread. The Yankee man was on the point

Of rising to his feet— The female turned and gruffly said, "I'd like to have that seat!" "No doubt of it!" the Yankee said;

But I was just about to rise And give it up to you, "When, with your nose turned up, you say ·I'd like to have that seat."

As if you owned the line of cars And rails upon the street. "Now, madam, that won't do for me, For if my seat you choose,

In asking for it, you, at least, Civility should use!" The female said, "On one like you," I would not words bestow --I've too much dignity for that,

I'd have you, sir, to know! The Yankee said, "Your dignity You've placed beneath your feet; So, stand upon your dignity, And I will keep my seat!"

We know not what she stood upon; But this we saw and know-She, who would ride o'er others' rights, Was forced on foot to go;

Por not a man would give his seat To her, with fallen crest, Although in satin dressed.

Riding a Trojan Horse.

Dr. Josiah Campbell, who lived for many years on the Western Reserve, in Ohio, was a most skillful physician, but one of the most eccentric and absent-minded persons in the world, (except Margaret, his wife, and she was fully his equal.) One summer morning, the doctor was caught out in a tremendous shower, which drenched bim to the skin. It soon cleared off, however, and the Dr. rode into his own yard, where he took the dripping saddle STEREOSCOPIC EMPORIUM Cornelius and added to it his own tools, is from his horse, and let him go adrift into the pasture. The saddle he placed on a stout log of wood which was elevated some four feet from the ground on two posts, where he had begun to build a platform to dry nearlies on.

At length, he began to feel the effects of the fierce rays of a mid-day sun, and, Most feignes will find Photography a most farinating and delightful ammement. We are prepared to fit out looking up from his book, he discovered a comfortable looking house close by him, upon which he sang out lustily for a drink of water.

Aunt Margaret, who had been for the last two hours very busy in the garden, soon made her appearance with a pitcher of milk, and after the thirsty stranger had taken a long draught, they entered into animated conversation, the Doctor launching out into rapturous praises of the scenery about the place, the neatness of the building, the fine orchard of peach and apple trees; and the lady, who had caught a glimpse of the saddle-bags, made a great many inquiries about the health of the neighborhood, etc.

The Doctor finally took his leave of the lady, assuring her that he would call on his return, and have some further conversation with her, as she reminded him so much of his wife, who, he was sure, would be very happy to make her acquaintance.

The lady turned to enter the house, and the Doctor had just gathered up his reins, when Jim Atwood dashed up to the gate with his horse in a lather of foam.

"What on airth are you doing, Doctor?" yelled Jim; "get off that log, and come along.

The Doctor was greatly astonished, at first, but after a few moments it got through his bair that he had been all the morning riding a beech log in his own door-yard!

A Lawyer built him an office in the form of an hexagon, or six square. The novelty of the structure attracted the attention of some Irishmen, who were passing by; they made a full stop and viewed the building critically. The lawyer, somewhat disgusted at their curiosity, lifted up the window, put his head out and addressed them: "What do you stand there for, like a pack of blockheads, gazing at my office? do you take it for a church?

"Faix," answered one of them, "I was thinkin' so, till I saw the Divil poke his head out ov the windy."

"What was the use of the eclipse?" HOMOOPATHIC PHYSICIAN, asked a young lady. "Oh, it gave the sun time for reflection," replied a wag.
