The Return of the Robin.

"Tis Spring, and my Robin come back to-day,

Perchel on the wild change flow, He warhed a heartiful room licky For his dear little wife and me: Six chirped by his alice while he wang so gay, eth, dearl what a time they have had, down South,

Led tired and bathered will be: But one little end we wang must bland, "Para way hanned." Then we winged our way to our native hand—

40, I would abobe, with my being bride.

Where men and bard and the : When the cloud in the city and the storm puts by, How happy would chall be! Wake up, hith flowers of on your towers!

While we find our best in the free! You have slept a long sleep, no vigils to keep. Like my dear little wife and me."

Then be surer of the place he was recked,

Then needly by the presence tree,

I indeped long to that somewhat some,

Some ry, and Tall of give;

Then he washed again, "to we have some back—

My dust little with and use?"
