He was an elderly gentleman, tall, spare, and stooping; was clothed in a suit of clerical black; and his pale, thin, whiskers prematurely gray. He was such graceful mien and dignified bearing, that he might have been taken for a prince of the blood attended by an old gentleman in waiting.

Next came forth a young gentleman, whose handsome person and haughty tined to bring about. manner at once attracted general attention. His form was tall, and finely proportioned, crowned by a haughty head and face, with high light, flaxen hair. His expression of the floor, murmuringcountenance, in keeping with his whole manner, was stern almost to forms a combination very attractive to most young women, and perhaps it was this that fascinated the young heiress of Swinburn Castle, for this was Albert Hastings, the bridegroom ing-case.
