The Club meeting called for last Saturday evening was postponed to accommodate very many who desired to hear Mr. Benjamin To-morrow (Saturday) evening is appointed for the Republican Club to meet at their room, corner of Ammons' Block--second story. Turn in, ye who can.

A Moan Forged. The New York Herald published the following, purporting to be an extract from a speech delivered by Abraham Lincoln, July 17, 1858, and says it savors strongly of John Brownism:

"I nevertheless did mean to go on the banks of the Ohio, and throw missiles into Kentucky, to disturb them in their domestic institutions."

"I have again and again said, that I would not enter into any of the States to disturb the institution of Slavery. Judge Douglas said, at Bloomington, that I used language most able and ingenious for concealing what I really meant; and that, while I had protested against entering into the State of Ohio, I nevertheless did mean to go on the banks of the Ohio and throw missiles into their domestic institutions."

We notice that the Argus, the Times, &c. &c., publish the Herald's forgery--but they will, we hope, make the proper correction. Let us see.

Ratification at Philadelphia. The friends of our candidates held an immense meeting at Independence Square. John B. Myers, an eminent merchant, presided, and speeches were made by Hon. Senator Trumbull, of Illinois; John Sherman of Ohio; Hon. James H. Campbell, of Pennsylvania, and a dozen others, from three different States. The different wards attended the meeting in procession, with banners, music, &c. The Daily News says:

"Saturday night, May 26th, 1860, will form a bright page in the local or political history of the city of Philadelphia, that will not soon be forgotten. The scene was Independence Square--the occasion was the ratification of the nominations of Lincoln and Hamlin. The demonstration was immense, the enthusiasm unbounded, much more so than any political assemblage we ever saw in Philadelphia--and we have attended all the Presidential ratification meetings in this city for the past quarter of a century."

The Philadelphia Press (Forney) says: "The meeting was very imposing and an enthusiastic one. It seems to be a combination of all the elements of the opposition, not the least of which was the prominence of the American and commercial elements. It indicated that the friends of Bell and Everett were far from indifferent to the success of Lincoln and Hamlin."

A series of resolutions, indorsing the nomination of Lincoln and Hamlin and the Chicago platform, were adopted. A resolution, prepared by Henry C. Carey and offered by Isaac Hazeltine, was also adopted. Mr. Hazeltine was a prominent Filmore man, but he like Daniel Ullman of New York, has come out for Lincoln and Hamlin.

CHICAGO, June 4.--A terrible tornado swept over Eastern Iowa and Northern Illinois last night, which has caused more destruction of life and property than any similar visitation remembered. The towns of Gamache, Iowa, and Allany, Illinois, were completely demolished. In the former thirty dead bodies have already been discovered, and there were still a number under the ruins of demolished buildings. In Allany some five or six bodies have been found, and there are fifty persons wounded--some seriously. The destruction was equally great at Morrison, Illinois. At Lynden several persons were killed and fifteen persons in the vicinity were badly injured. The storm passed two miles north of Amboy, and it is reported that over ten persons were killed there and a number badly injured.

The tornado traveled over a distance of ninety miles in Iowa and seventy in Illinois. The loss of life is supposed to be about one hundred and fifty.

Letter From Gov. Seward.

The following was addressed by Mr. Seward, to the gentlemen of the Republican Central Committee of New York city, who invited him to attend a meeting to be held for the ratification of the proceedings of the National Convention.

ALBANY, May 21, 1860. GENTLEMEN: I will not affect to conceal the anxiety with which I have received the letters in which you and so many other respected friends have tendered to me expressions of renewed and enduring confidence. These letters will remain with me as assurances in future years, that although I was not unwilling to wait, even for the adoption of the political principles, yet that they did nevertheless receive the generous support of many good, wise and patriotic men of my own time.

Such assurances, however made, under the circumstances now existing derive their value largely from the fact that they are given through the channels of private correspondence, and altogether unknown to the world. You will at once perceive that such expressions would become painful to me and justly offensive to the community, if they should be allowed to take on any public character. It is therefore respectfully and consistently with your own public purposes, I would have delayed my reply to you until I could have had an opportunity of making it verbally, next week, on my way to Washington, after completing the arrangements for the repairs upon my dwelling here, rendered necessary by my illness.

The same reason determines me also to decline your kind invitation to attend a meeting, in which you propose some demonstrations of respect to myself, which so justly considering the recent National Convention at Chicago. At the same time, it is your right to have a frank and candid exposition of my own opinions and sentiments upon that important subject.

My friends know very well, that while they have always generously made my private communications to them an exclusive care, none has only to be executed them faithfully, so as to be able at the close of their assigned terms to resign them into the hands of the people without forfeiture of the public confidence. The presentation of my name to the Chicago Convention was, thus, their act, not mine. The disappointment, therefore, is their disappointment, not mine. It may have found them unprepared. On the other hand, I have no sentiment either of disappointment or discontent; for who, in any possible case, could, without presumption, claim that his private communications to his friends, his candidly ascertained that they were made by the American people? I find in the resolutions of the Convention a platform as satisfactory to me as if it had been framed with my own hands; and in the Candidates, adopted by its eminent and able Republicans, with whom I have cordially and warmly maintained the principles embodied in that excellent creed. I cheerfully give them a sincere and earnest support.

I trust, moreover, that those with whom I have labored so long, that common service in a noble cause has created between them and myself a personal friendship, far stronger than the experience of political men, will induce me in a confident belief that no sense of disappointment will be allowed by them to hinder or delay, or in any way embarrass, the progress of that cause to the consummation which is demanded by a patriotic regard to the safety and welfare of the country and the best interests of mankind.

I am, sincerely and respectfully, Your friend and obedient servant, WM. H. SEWARD.

Views of Gen. Cameron. A grand ratification meeting was held at Harrisburg, on Friday evening, 25 of May, at which Hon. SIMON CAMERON presided. Speeches were made by Hon. O. S. FERRY, of Connecticut, (now a Republican Member of Congress, but a Filmore man in 1856) Hon. JOHN W. KILLINGER, JAMES CASBY, Esq., &c.

On taking the chair, Gen. CAMERON spoke substantially as follows: FELLOW CITIZENS: I thank you for the invitation to be present with you to-night, and for the opportunity it affords me of conferring with you concerning recent events. I have come to your building from my place in the Senate to join with you in ratifying the action of the representatives of our party at Chicago. Not even the profound respect I bear for you could have induced me to do so, had I not clearly ascertained that no harm could come to the Tariff Bill, in which you are so deeply interested, during my brief absence.

It may be proper that I should briefly allude to myself before proceeding further. I need scarcely say to you that I have no feeling of personal disappointment in the result. It is the proper discharge of the duties of a patriot, and it is surrounded with care and anxiety, which a brave man might fear to approach; yet, the place is so high that no true patriot is at liberty to decline it when it is offered for his acceptance. I have had but one sentiment and one interest in regard to the nomination of a candidate for the Presidency, and that was that the candidate selected should be true to the interests of Pennsylvania, which I believe to be the interests of the whole country. In this connection, I did hope that the person fixed upon would have been the favorite of our sister State, Wm. Washburn. I knew, as did the entire country, that he, through a long and useful career of public life, had been the able and zealous advocate of all measures which promised protection and encouragement to free white labor, while representing a State whose prosperity is believed to depend mainly upon the activity of her great metropolis. He had that foresight so characteristic of a great statesman, which enabled him to remember that the coal and the iron of Pennsylvania, and the agricultural products of other States, as well as their varied and important manufactures, must be combined in order that their full effect and force might be brought to bear upon the great progressive commercial interests of his own. On more than one occasion, when the interests of Pennsylvania have been threatened, he has promptly come to the rescue of those interests. Pennsylvania could well, in return, as a mark of her respect for his ability and confidence in his integrity, have entrusted to him her destiny, as well as the interests of the great family of States. I am aware that Mr. Washburn's candid opinion of Mr. Seward's statesmanship and public services, have been met with a doubt as to his availability for the Presidential race. As for me, I have had no doubt upon that subject. I have, and have ever had, unlimited confidence in the intelligence and sagacity, as well as the virtue, of the American people, and the people of Pennsylvania in no degree rank below the masses elsewhere in these qualities. Knowledge of the temper of the people from the intimate relations it has been my good fortune to hold to them, I believe they were ready to take a representative man, and with him go forward to the work of re-organizing the government under such auspices as ruled when the destinies of the Republic were being shaped by the Washingtons, the Adamses, the Jeffersons and the Madisons of history. The corruptions, the unparalleled extravagance and the mal-administration of public affairs, which had fair to the present an infamous era in the country's history, had prepared the people for active and willing services under a great and energetic leader.

But the Convention which recently met, deliberated, and harmoniously closed its session at Chicago, after a fair and candid interchange
