[Correspondence of the Star & Chronicle.]

Scraps.

POTATO ROT.—At Washington, an intelligent and apparently reliable man of 60, stated that in "Egypt," or Southern Illinois (his home,) excellent potatoes are plenty, and they have not now and never had the potato rot. Is that the general condition of the country, or only true of a special locality? He describes the region as a paradise of fertility, health and cheap lands, but could not explain why it has been so slowly filling up—for it was first settled of any part of the State, and was for half a century most accessible by the Ohio and other rivers.

TRAITORS IN DISGUISE.—The Potter Investigating Committee, it is published, believe there are Five Hundred open or half-way Secessionists still in the various departments at Washington—but to prove them such is the point. It is cruel to dismiss them as traitors, without sufficient evidence—and many of them are now urgently required at their posts. So the Government seems to be required to nourish a brood of vipers at her very vitals!—There seems to be treason everywhere, here—in the departments, both branches of Congress, Supreme Court, and in every highway and byway. Even an old lady I chanced to converse with said softly, "It wasn't so until Mr. Lincoln came." Remarks like the following, some from men of prominence, indicate the present tactics of Treason under the U. S. power: "We must settle this fuss."—"The South can't live under Yankee rule"—"Abolitionism can never compel people to submit to a government against their will."—"This coercion is against the very spirit and form of our pretended popular will."—"Well, Republicanism is a failure." Such talk, industriously circulated, is intended to prepare the public mind for abject submission to the Southern Oligarchy. The poison of Aristocracy, in its worst form, is still raging in the veins of the nation.

One gentleman, (of a family that once lorded 200 slaves,) living on a Clerkship, and a professed Unionist, (provided Slavery can rule, as before!) said, "The only way is to give slaves enough to eat—treat them fairly—and keep them down."—"But, sir, don't you find that every increase of their knowledge and enjoyment tends to make them unsafe, discontented, and dangerous?"—"Ah! yes," said he, with sorrowful look, "that's the trouble."

WARMING THE CARS.—I see it stated, that the city railway cars in Lynn, Mass., are now heated underneath the floor, and thus made comfortable at little expense; the heated air may pass in a chamber between the inside and outside floors—coming up in small orifices about where the feet are placed, perhaps—and thus throwing the heat where it is most needed. In Germany, we are told, a bed of hot sand, or of hot stones, under the feet, and renewed from time to time, is used, and no fire. As arranged among us, we have a big stove in the cars (very dangerous in case of an accident,) sending about your head (which needs no heat) enough hot, fetid air, to sicken and half stifle you, while the tender feet—which require the greatest warmth, and which carry a gentle glow all over the system—are on the cold floor, and receive no aid from the stove (as heat always rises) unless you go to it. The matter is worthy the attention of railway men in cold climates. A current of warm air rising in cold weather, (and perhaps of cold air in warm weather) would be very agreeable and wholesome to the traveler for pleasure or business.

HOTELS AT HARRISBURG.—A few Members of the Legislature have set up Bachelor's Hall—hiring a private house, and servants, and getting their own "vittals, sleep and drink," (just as Students do in Clubs at Lewisburg.) Certain pennyaliners for Sensation journals have made this the occasion for an onslaught upon the Hotels of that City, as being poorly kept, with exorbitant charges. Having, one time and another, stopped at perhaps a dozen different hotels in Harrisburg, the charges seem to us partial and unworthy. The market of Harrisburg is certainly large and varied, and there is no reason for any deficiency. It is only when the Legislature is in session, and on special occasions, however, that all these Hotels have ample custom—and yet, those captious quill-drivers would be the first to find fault if the city had not public accommodations for all demands. The landlords must charge full rates during the busy season, to make up for their idle months. And there is a variety of Hotels there, so that every one may be suited at some one of them. A cut-stone house, richly ornamented, and full of costly furniture and wares, with a waiter at every other chair, and furnishing half the edibles and potables on the printed bills of fare, must take a pile of money to keep going—and those who stop at such houses, only, must be expected to make up that money. It may be considered "pretty steep toll" for enjoying rich and expensive architecture, upholstery, &c., but it is not compulsory. True, you do not get the "worth of your money" in eating or sleeping—but you pay for the "pride of the eyes," the fashion, luxury and extravagance wherein you participate. You may get better fare at a less showy and costly house, where you will be charged for what you get, and not for what you and everybody see. Every man to his taste, if his purse permits—but don't grumble, if you stop at a palace, for paying your share to keep up palatial appearances.

Although not disposed to notice or recommend patent Medicines, as a matter of general principle, I have yet, in a number of instances, been induced to depart from my usual course, and express my approbation of Dr. Lane's Bitters. I have used them in my own family, and have had the opportunity of witnessing their effects in the families of others, and I am prepared to say that I have never used any medicine which has given more general satisfaction. I have no hesitation in recommending them to the public, and I do it with confidence that they will not disappoint the reasonable expectations of those who use them.
