A UNION SONG.

Now "Abe" has got his tools to work, Good wedges, axe, and mail, He'll make the Rebels, like the trees, Before his axe to fall.

A wedge or two already in. Ho'll drive both hard and well, And every blow that Lincoln strikes A loyal tale to tell!

The tools he uses are the men Gone forth to battle bold, To chase Rebellion from the land,

And still their birthright hold! That birthright from their fathers came When struggling to repel The tyrant's power, that once was swayed

In vain their hearts to queli! Those Patriots, fired with noble zeal, Pressed on through fire and blood, And as the victors of the field

At length they proudly stood!

Two Liberty they fought for then, The cause is now the same; Then, strike! bold freemen of the North, Be worthy of your fame!

For you are like the forest trees You've lived among so long, The hardy pine, the spreading eak, The "hick'ry" tough and strong So if the Rebels here and there May fell a Freemen hold.

He'll slay them in his fall as much As Sampson did of old. For thousands more will onward press, To follow where he fell!

And, like the falling Temple, crush

The Rebels down to bell. And thus their stars may com be set, Their stripes upon them fall; And Union Stars and Scripes again Be waving o'er us all! Use

How to Make Change.

It is becoming a serious difficulty, in raising Christian contributions, to get I centifor the last sex months "change." All of us like to be giving, continually, something-realizing that many, contributing small sums, swell | real Dimes Saving Institution into larger sums, thus aiding the various causes, and stimulating our liberality. We can not all give large sums. Change is, indeed, hard to get, for the masses. What shall we do? The only remedy I know, is to give bills-of course, not so numerous as our gifts in coin would be, but equal in amount. If I can not give to or $2 bill at the byjuning (not at the E close) of the year. If I can not give my I can give my $2, $3, $1, to some one of them, and pray for all. If I can not give a small sum every time the box is passed at an Association, Convention, Dedication &e , I can give something larger to some one object, on every public occasion.

To those who deal in dollars only-of whom we have a goodly number, (and "may their tribe increase !") -these bints may seem of little worth; but there are hundreds and thousands, of limited means, who desire to give of their little, and who realize the power of "many drops" to make large rivers, and who may by these hints better realize how they ean do something for God in the way of giving, notwithstanding the peculiar impediments of the times.
