All reports appear to indicate that our forces have either succeeded in capturing Charleston, or are about to succeed. The only information obtainable has to come through rebel sources. The rebels and their sympathizers along the line are unusually gloomy, dispirited and quiet; their pickets are exceedingly careful to allow no news or papers to cross the line. Richmond papers, however, of a late date have been smuggled through, but they contain not one word respecting the movements in South Carolina. We believe that a few days will confirm the welcome news that Charleston is ours.
