The Bachelor and the Baby. "What shall I do?" and the old bachclor stamped about the sitting-room in a perfect rage of doubt, looking first at the napping baby in the little willow cradle. and then at the busy French clock on the

"As sure as my name is Joseph Phelps, that little, two-fisted, large lunged nephew of mine is about waking, and it wants one whole bour of the time which its mother appointed for her return. Whew! I actually sweat thinking about it. What can I do with it? How can I treat it to sugar what-do-you-call em's, or hold it, or tret it, or do anything with it?"

At this jungture, a faint wail from the baby receptacle brought bashelor Phelps to his tups. With an energy and alacrity eradle, sending the indegrant baby into a &c. &c., for sale at this place, in the Spring, perfect transer of kicks and squalls. Backwords and forwards, from one side of the pillow to the other, the round red face rolled, the infant fists were elenched with a force that purpled them, while from the white, plump throat, came a cry that set the bachelor wild with fear.

Again Joe looked at the clock. "What in the deuce can I do?" he exclaimed, viewing woofully the little is flomed foce before him.

He sat down in a big chair before the baby, spread a double cradle quilt over his knees, and with a look of terror upon his face, proceeded to take the baby from its resting place. He drew the young hopefel into his lap, just as a very nest old lady would pick up a pocket handkerchief, with his thumbs and fingers. A fresh yell from the rosy mouth of the baby was the only expression of thanks, as he commenced the never-out of-fashion baby-trot.

"It must be that something is pricking him. Shoo! shoo!" said Joe, commeneing a search for the aggravating pin that an attempt to turn the baby ever, but oh ! the clumsiness of his fingers-the little fiver, sending out a cry that was louder, clearer, deadlier, than before.

"Lord save me. I've broken its neck ! and in the agony of despair tried to quiet bim. A thought struck Joe. He saw a basque lying against the wall of the ad joining bedroom, and, with a smile of delight upon his countenance, he went for it. Sure enough, there it was, stuffing. bodice, and all a real monument of female ingenuity. He was wild with jay. He pinned it over his coat, and fastened the sleeves behind him. He took baby trougge in the future. and laid its head against the false breast-
