

OUR COLORED BRAVES.

History will record few examples of as calm, unselfish, deathless bravery, as was displayed by the colored Union soldiers at Fort Hudson, Milliken's Bend, and before Fort Wagner. Let them be honored!

Unpopular--for long they've borne The badge of shame, the lash of scorn; Not fair--but seamed with many a scar, Their bodies, like their spirits, are; Not learned in books, or wise in speech, When tyrants made it crime to teach; But strong of limb, and true of heart, Behold them in their moonish swart, For these, their trial days, arrayed, Those soldiers of the Black Brigade!

"Forward!" and with one pulse sublime, Like ringing tread of martial hymn, They press--and onward as they sweep, The Rebel's crimson missiles leap Against them as our bleeding host Within the battle's cloud is lost; Flash sword and bayonet, shot and shell Fly screaming in that mist of hell; And still right onward, undismayed, They hold their way--our Black Brigade!

Beneath the flag they fiercely tread Though every field was heaped with dead, And slippery grows the grass with gore, But "Onward! Onward!" yet once more Alas! in vain--the moated wall Mocks them, but valiantly they fall; Anselmo dies, but to his breast The banner borne in life is pressed, And dastards they who did not aid The heroes of the Black Brigade!

Undismayed, but ah! too few, The desperate combat they renew; The Negro's prowess is in vain, And powerless the white man's brain; The day is lost, on every side Have Saxons fled; let none deride Who mark the black men backward go, With eyes of rage and footsteps slow; Who saw the remnant snail, huzzard In honor of the Black Brigade!

Yet not for them was lost the day Who made, like Waukegan, a way, For bridge-like o'er their bodies dead Shall Freedom to their brethren tread; The sickle shall grasp no more, But harvest in the fields of war; Their history shall keep the fame Of those who, dying, overcame, And poets in their songs shall braid The memory of the Black Brigade!

Vallandigham escaped the blockade, through the aid of Jeff Davis, and is now in Canada. The Chattanooga Rebel was the first paper to nominate him for Governor of Ohio, and it laid down a plan for the campaign which has thus far been faithfully observed by Val and the Ohio Democracy. Between the Rebels of the South and the Copperheads of Ohio they would elect him, but for the fact that the loyal buckeyes, without distinction of party, will cast 50,000 or so majority against him. The rebel armies are now defeated or captured at every point, and the crowning effort of the patriots of the North will be the defeat of the apologists of treason and defamers of the army and government, at our coming elections. Patience, J.H. When the loyal ballot-boxes thunder in Pennsylvania and Ohio, the last expiring hour of treason will perish!

Col. Alleman's regiment, now stationed at Gettysburg, has an old soldier of the war of 1812 in its ranks. His name is Peter Hileman, a member of Co. F., raised in Sunbury, Northumberland county. When he told the mustering officer, in Harrisburg, that he was 74 years old, the officer opened his eyes with astonishment, and asked him whether he thought he could do service. The old hero told him he thought he could kill a Rebel as well as anybody else. We learn that he was the first man to put his name down to march to the defence of his native State, at the formation of the company.

Vallandigham, in his address to the Ohio Copperheads, says that he found no men in the South who would consent to submission. Had a loyal man passed through the dominions of treason as he did, a different story might have been told, but no true man could confide his opinions to a Northern traitor. The Mobile Advertiser says that there has been "signs of the white feather fluttering during the few past gloomy days." Val didn't see it, however, although the Southern press admits and laments it!

Thursday afternoon one of the most terrific storms passed over Berks county, that has visited that section of country for some years. Trees were blown down, houses unroofed, and, in some instances, barns were blown over and the roofs carried away. The streets of Reading were strewn with limbs torn from the trees, though not a house was unroofed, or a chimney blown down in the whole city.

The late invasion has cured a great many rebel sympathizers in those sections of Maryland and Pennsylvania visited by Lee's army. They are now for war to the knife and even to the hilt, having had a practical taste of rebel rule.

The Hon John Jay Crittenden died on Sunday morning, at Frankfort, Ky., in the 77th year of his age. His death was caused by general debility.
