It is reported that Gen. Halleck recently said :

"Sir, we must either raise two hundred thousand men this fall for victory and peace, or eight hundred thousand men next Spring to prevent all that we have won being wrung from us."

This states the question of the necessity of the draft in its simplest form. The men are needed for the work, now ; the task may now be accomplished; next year it may be too late. A thousand circumstances have brought affairs to this condition ; a thousand others may interpose to make delay fatal.
