Their personal property should be used in defraying the expenses of the revolution-their slaves released and liberated -and their lands, as far as practicable, divided among our soldiers who have nobly sustained the Government in the hour of its screet trials. I have spoken thus freely of the policy that I think should be pursued, for these are the questions upon which the people will soon be called to act.

If you stand in the loyal States firm, and determined to carry out this policy, the days of the Rebellion are easily numbered; but if you temporize, and divide, the war has scarcely commenced, and aparehy and bloodshed will cover our happy land. I conjure every one who loves liberty, to forget party, and stand by our country in this dark hour of its trial. Your property, your lives, and the bappiness of your
