SILENCE. BY J. R. LOWELL.

When the cup of hope brims over, And the soul has drank its fill; When the loved one meets the lover, And their hearts in sunshine hover With one impulse and one will-Then the useless tongue is still.

When the heart is bare of gladness,

And the helpless sense of ill Goads the spathy of sadness Onward through a whirl of madness To a darker drear and chill-

Then the palsied tongue is still. When the soul for power sigheth,

Struggling for art's purer skill, And the prophet heart o'erflieth All the agony it trieth, All the tear drops it must spill-

Then the traneed tongue is still.

When two hearts that love are parted, And truth lingers but to kill; When they strive to be hard-hearted, And the props of love are started, With a terror and a thrill-

Then the choking tongue is still. Oh ! sweet silence ! they believe thee

Who have called thee vain and weak ; Speech is emptiness beside thee,

Joe and wee have glorified thee, Love and longing never seek

Any better way to speak. All the deepest thoughts and feelings,

Which the roots of life enfold : Passion's sudden shocks and reelings, Love's first tremulous revealings, Never can be fully told Save by thee, revered of old.

The following announcement we make with the confident hope that we are pointing out a profitable investment :

What to do with a "Green-Back." There is, just now, a way of using Uncle Samuel's paper Dollars so as to get back the worth of many gold dollars in a single year. Everybody has heard of Seth Boyden's wonderial new Strawberry. From all accounts, A is a marvellous thing-the berries nearly as large as a ben's egg, and as good as they are large. Dealers were after it, offering as high as $3,000 for the plants, to speculate spon; but we are glad to know that the enterprising Publisher of the American Agricul-turist got the start of them, and bought up all the plants, and is multiplying them in order to give them away to his subscribers ! This is in effect a free gift to the Public-for the Agriculturist, costing only one dollar a year, is of itself worth many dollars to every one. as we can testify, having ourselves long been a reader of it. To those unacquainted with it, we would say that the Agriculturist is a ALL large Journal, of 32 pages in every number, is beautifully got up, and is illustrated with many pleasing and instructive Engravings, which are alone worth the whole cost. The pages are literally filled with good things-plain, practical, reliable information upon everything connected with the work of the Harsenous, the Gampes, and the Fans,-including a very pleasing and instructive De-partment for Children and Youth that is hardly surpassed by any of the professedly Califren's Magazines. The thousands of useful hints and suggestions in the Agricul-furist, all prepared by practical working men and women who know what they are talking out as a spacious and substantial about-can not fail to be worth many dollars table to spatia, the work and substantial to every reader, whether residing in City, Village, or Country. There are special reasons for subscribing now : First, the rule for distributing the Strawberry plants is, wirst come first served ;" and Second, every new anbseriber for the 23d annual Volume (that is, for all of 1864), will get the remaining numbers of this year vase.- Take our advice then. and send a dollar at once to the Publisher. (Onixor Jupp, 41 Park Low, N. Y. Cdy.) and secure the paper, and the extra numbers, and also an early place in the great Strawherry list. If the plants are to come to you by mail, as they can safely do, send an extra five cents to cover the mailing. Those of correct action at all rates of speed. scribing, can get a post-paid copy by sending

RIGHTS OF ALL MEN to a share in civil chines are for manufacturing purpogovernment. But Woodward has placed ses. himself on the record as opposed to three classes of men baving an equal share in American government-1st, those born elsewhere ; 2d, colored persons, who voted in Penn'a up to 1838 ; and volunteers out of the State fighting the rebellion. These three classes-Foreigners, Negroes, and Soldiers-be ranked together, and would depy the right of suffrage, the' they pay tax and are amonable to the laws all their lives. In short, Woodward is an aristocrat at heart, and believing "Slavery an incalculable blessing," he looks with an equal contempt upon foreigners and soldiers, (except when he wants their votes.)

"Then thos wilt H W CRO not believe anything thee or others has not seen." "No." "Did then ever thy own brains ?" "No." "Ever see a man who did see them ?" "No." "Does thee believe thee has any ?" This last question put au end to the conversation.

The Copperheads are opposed to enlisting or reinforcing the army for fear the war will be brought to a close, and the midiers come home to vote. They dread the closing of the war, the suppression of the rebellion, and the return of the sol diers, more than they do pestilence and famine! They know it will be a sorry day for them when the seven hundred thousand soldiers return. Therefore prolong the war, keep the army weak, and unable to give the rebellion a final blow unsole to give the next Presidential election, in every variety. and a Copperhead may be elected, if the suldiers are not at home to vote.
