One picture has a ten fold power-Tis graven with a mighty pen; A plume torn from an eagle's wing. Dipped in the warmest blood of men A battle-field with recking sod, With stars and stripes and bugle's blast, And brave men fleeing from a foe, At last, at last !

The meadow grass was low and green, The primrose drooped upon its stem ; The sky was calm, the ground was strewn With sweet wild stars of Bethlehem; And on that soil my hero fell, Amid the carnage raging fast,

Those withered blossoms drank his blood, At last, at last!

They told me this, they said in death His pale lips breath'd a loved one's name, And blessed the cause for which he died, The cause he never brought to shame; The words came sweeping o'er my soul Like some mad river rushing past, Only to drown my living dreams, At last, at last!

They told me this at eventide, But morning never dawned for me; Can sunlight dance across my brow, And even make one smile, when he Is lying 'neath a starry sky With battle sods above him cast, A hero in a nameless grave?

At last, at last! A whisper low when fevered winds Beat mockingly against my cheek, My hero! who in all the world Will know the name I dave not sneak None, none; the veil swings slowly back, And shuts me from the gloomy past; I turn away and weep alone. At last, at last !

Ben Gen. JAMES H. LANE told this have half a mind to relate an ancedote, to show how the slaveholders cling to their property. [Voices-'do it; Do it.'] Well, I will. We were marching to Springfield -I was in the rear of the column-when I was informed by one of my men that a woman in great distress wanted to see me. I told him to bring her to me, and he did. She was a big, brawny woman, over forty, Limestone-Wm F Loose, Abram Walter and was crying. I asked her what the matter was. She said, 'My two sons have joined the Confederate army, and now your soldiers have taken my two niggers." Said I, 'My good woman, that is not the worst thing that could happen to you. I am on the track of your sons, and I shall probably catch them in a day or two and hang them.' [Laughter.] She threw her arms about my neck and said : "Gen. Lane, you may do what you want with my sons, if you'll only return the niggers." [Great laughter.] I disengaged myself Lewis-Jas Moore, Edwa Orwig, Ab Mench from her embrace, but didn't promise to return her niggers."

A SURE THING .- A Vallandighamer with a Union man, concerning the probability of the election of the convict candidate. Driven to the wall, the Vallandighamer declared, in a rich Irish brogue, that "Ingeanny would go for him." We suggested that South Carolina would go for him, too. The ready response was, "Yes an' South

Caroliny will go for him."

All of this actually occurred, and was said in good faith, on the part of the Vallandighamer.—Springfield News.

Reverdy Johnson made an address at Saratoga on Friday, at the close of the County Fair. On the state of the Nation, he said the Government must be sustained. As to Slavery, it was an evil spirit, fruitful of National difficulties, and must finally fall in the contest with free principles. He said of the Proclamation that such slaves as it liberated could never be re-enslaved; where they were not liberated, the people would settle the matter themselves when they came back to the
