EFFECT OF CONFISCATION.-Jno. C. Underwood, Fifth Auditor, in charge of the Bureau for confiscating and selling Bre Rebel property to pay the expenses of the present insurrection, thus states, in a recent speech, the position of the Government, and the final results of confiscation to the nation :

"And then will come the confiscation, sale, and subdivision of the old Rebel plantations into farms, owned and cultivated by soldiers and other loyal men who have stood by the country in its hour of trial. And what a signal display of retributive justice shall we see in this! For has not enough loyal blood been poured out and mingled with the soil of Virginia, to extinguish every Rebel right, establish the most unquestionable title in the heirs of the patriots and martyrs who have fallen in defending the liberties-and unity of the nation? With a denser white population thus obtained, will naturails come a higher civilization, free schools, universal education, arts, manufactures, and a corresponding growth of christian morality and pure religion.
