The Monarch and the Beggar.

BY S. S. HORNOR, PARIS.

A monarch and a beggar once wandered side by side,

And mutually complained that their wants were unsupplied. The beggar craved a pittance wherewith to buy him bread ;

- The monarch had no appetite, and cares deranged his head.
- The beggar prayed for raiment to shield him from the cold ;
- The monarch wanted continents, more
- power, and more gold. The beggar craved a pallet where he
- might rest and weep ; The king had downy couches, but would give the world for sleep. The beggar asked for comfort, he little cared for wealth ; The king had boundless riches, but would give them all for health. The beggar craved a hovel, for the night wind pinched him sore ; The king had many palaces, but thought he needed more. The beggar plied his crutches, his palsied imbs to aid ; The king surveyed his palfreys that in his stables neighed. "I faint," exclaimed the beggar, "from fasting day and night;" The king deemed feasting tiresome of food he loathed the sight. The beggar craved one friend sincere in this his hour of need ; The monarch had ten thousand friends, but not one friend indeed.

The beggar slept upon the ground, his pillow was a stone,

He sometimes went without a meal, oft times his feast a bone ;

The monarch wondered how it was all night he lay awake,

He sometimes thought his wines were bad, that caused his head to ache.

The beggar eyed his patches as he shivered 'neath the blast ;

The monarch closer wrapped his fure, for the snow fell thick and fast ;

The beggar through a window peeped where fires were burning bright ;

He cried, "How happy must they be who slumber there at night !"

Says the king, "This is my palace, with the comforts there you see,

It is as chilly and as cheerless at is possible to me.'

Then the beggar sought some shelter where he might meekly die,

He also asked forgiveness from Him who teract the slanders and falschoods which

To make that victory decisive, our great need now is local organization and local effort, and wherever two or three are gathered together in the name of LIBER. MURDER IN KANSAS.-Rev. Mr. Snyder, well known through Western Penneylvania, and formerly presiding Elder in the United Brethern Church in Blair county, was deliberately shot by three roffians in Kansas, about the time of the Lawrence massacre. The three fiends who had been dispatched to kill him, found him before the door milking his cow, and asked him if he was the owner of that house; and being auswered affirmatively, drew their pistols and fired. The three halls passed through his body, and he fell He was greatly esteemed both as dead a man and a preacher, and he fell a vicm to traitors on account of his firmness to the Union.

The Government can do nothing which the Copperheads will not denounce. Their papere, from the largest to the smallest are frantic at the suspension of the Habeas Corpus. We do not suppose that trai-tors will be pleased at any act that defeats their plans. So let them howl.
