that Southern Confederacy. [Applause] You may eet as spart by a treaty, or in any other way you please, by the Ohio river under Jeff. Davis, but there are in Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Maryland, thousands of loyal men who will reduce you to this alternative-you must fight for them again, and you must s stand by us, or be disgraced. We don't intend to belong to the Southern Confederacy. If the majority of the people carry Kentucky, and Kentucky carry us into the Sathern Coufederacy, we don't intend to go. We will call upon you to help whip them, and keep us from going. I will frankly say to you, that we are afraid of mothing in the world except of you. We are not afraid of anything they can do, but we are afraid there will be a political revolution in the North, whereby the North will desert us and leave us to be crushed out. That is all we are afraid of. If you will stand firm, triumph is just as certain es that to morrow's sun will rise. If you give way in a time like this, you will bring upon yourselves and upon us infinite desolation, and the country is lost. Don't you know, as I said before, that God has reised you up for such a time as this? If you do not prove yourselves worthy of it, your bonor will be destroyed, and God will bring deliverance from another quarter. If you are altogether unworthy of the mon that God has sent before you, if in a time like this you Northern people fail to do your duty, you will go down to your disbonored graves, and your children will stand up and weep over you, and do that which you ought to have done your-improvements, this season, for the coming salves.
