Quack Nostrums.

THE NEW YORK DAY BOOK says: "The majority of Hair Washes, Hair Dyes, Hair Tonics, Hair Oils, and the numberless preparations which are now before the public under such extravagant, hyperbolical and fantastic titles as are to be found in every window cards, and newspaper headings, as hair preparations, are all humbugs of the first water, their real merit, when they possess any, is, that they do no harm. ROUP'S LARD, WHALE OIL, LARD OIL, SWEET OIL, scented and colored, make up, as hair dressings, the greasy and the so-called ghee bottles, the costliest character of humbug, and when thus costly, are baptized with some ridiculous term, and caught at by verdant young and old of both sexes. Such is not the character of Professor Wood's Hair Restorative. This preliminary remark is made to prepare the public for the fulsome" Xilophidorium, or any other astounding and startling catchpenny terms he simply advertises a Hair Restorative—a fact precisely as he represents it, and a fact it is acts. Buy Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and as you value your scalp, eye, your very brains, apply nothing else for it may be fatal. You will get a more worthy substance than perfumed lard oil on your cranium. Remember, Wood's Restorative for the Hair is the best article extant."

It Will, by Nature's own Process, Restore Gray Hair to the Original Color, Will make Hair Grow on Bald Heads, Will remove Dandruff, Will cure all humors, Will remove at once all itching, Will cure all eruptions, Will cure Scald Head, Will make the Hair Soft and Glossy, Will make the old appear young again, Will preserve the Color of Hair to old age, Will always Fasten it and stop its Falling, And is one of the best Toilet Articles for the Hair now in use.

Manufactured by O. J. WOOD & CO., and sold Wholesale and Retail, at 444 Broadway, New York, and 114 Market st., St. Louis, Mo. Sold in Pittsburgh by Dr. GEO. H. KEYSER, D. L. PARKINSON & CO., and by Druggists everywhere. se26

LATEST NEWS BY MAIL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31, 1861.

From the best authority I learn that dispatches went from the Disunionists here to-day to Alabama that Fort Pickens must be stormed; that the only way to insure a Secession triumph in Virginia, was to precipitate the actual conflict.

It admits of little doubt that plottings to seize the Departments and the Capitol at night have been on foot, and are still continued, despite the increase of troops here. Persons of higher rank than Government clerks are involved in it. It is said that at one time the 12th or 13th of February was fixed on.

The Macedonian and Brooklyn will be in a position, near Fort Pickens, to sweep the island, and to command the other forts now held by the Revolutionists. In view of the approaching Conference here on February 4, it was determined, with the approbation of General Scott, not to land the troops they carried, unless an attack was menaged on Fort Pickens. At the first signal of such demonstrations, the orders are to re-enforce Col. Slemmer's garrison, and open on the assailants. Provisions are to be landed immediately. No assault is apprehended, notwithstanding Col. Chase's belligerent bulletins.

Tortugas was strengthened just in time, as an organization had been perfected in New Orleans to seize the fort, and was about embarking when the transports arrived. Capt. Meigs writes that his position is perfectly secure, and he can hold it against any probable assault. Reinforcements have, however, been ordered from Texas, to make assurance doubly sure.

A conference of the delegations from the border States was held in the reception-room of the House, at the request of the New York Committee of capitalists and merchants. Mr. Dodge addressed them briefly, and said the Republicans would not accept the Crittenden Compromise, and therefore it must be abandoned for some more practicable proposition which did not require surrender of principle at their hands. Several members from the border States expressed a disposition to adjust on a basis of Mr. Corwin's report, with modifications; and Mr. Rust exhibited a more conciliatory disposition than his recent speech indicated. This meeting manifested some real purpose to relinquish exorbitant demands, and approach the question more fairly than any yet held.—N. Y. Tribune.

It is a remarkable fact that upon nearly every question touching the Union for several days, Messrs. Douglas and Crittenden have been found voting with Mr. Seward against the majority of the Southern men in the Senate.

Despite the protestations that no raids against the Capital are now contemplated, General Scott is very anxious on the subject, and feels that there is imminent necessity for a larger federal force here to maintain the Government. I understand that it is anticipated that the trouble will come immediately after the Virginia election.

The Government continues unfortunately the failure to receive any news from Pensacola. The President now expresses the hope that a collision has been avoided. There is reason to believe that strong efforts have been made by the secession leaders here to induce Major Chase, in command of the State troops at Pensacola, to precipitate a collision by attacking Fort Pickens, for its effect upon Virginia and other Border States. The instructions to the Brooklyn and Macedonian undoubtedly direct them to resist at every extremity any attempt of Florida troops to take the fort.

It is understood here that the first movement in the Board of Commissioners from the States to meet here on Monday next, will be propositions by Virginia for the withdrawal of the federal troops from the capital, the States guaranteeing that there shall be no hostile demonstration affecting the peace of the capital.—N. Y. Times.

The movements of North Carolina, in sending commissioners to the border state congress here, and to the Montgomery congress, to urge the latter to accede to the Crittenden resolutions, as well as the action of the Tennessee legislature, countermanding the order of the governor in sending commissioners to Montgomery, startle the dunnon plotters. Conservatism comes from a section they looked for by them.

It is a singular fact that the authorities at Charleston have, by some means, become possessed of copies of the orders of the Brooklyn.

Although it is taken for granted that the administration will peremptorily refuse to accede to the demand of Col. Hayne for the surrender of Fort Sumter, yet it will do all it can for peace.

It is expected here that South Carolina will soon attack the fort, and the question is, whether the war will be continued, or soon settled, one way or the other?

Southern senators and Col. Hayne do not doubt but that the attack will be made on Fort Sumter before the expiration of ten days.—N. Y. World.

THE ULTIMATUM OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

WASHINGTON, January 31.

Colonel Hayne has been engaged to-day in preparing a letter to the President in regard to affairs at Charleston. This document will contain the ultimatum of South Carolina, which is understood to be the unconditional surrender of that fort to the authorities of South Carolina.

Colonel H. had been instructed to make this demand when he first arrived here, but was dissuaded by leading Southern men to withdraw it. The demand is now presented in the most positive terms, and will be laid before the President to-morrow, in Colonel Hayne's communication.

A rumor was very current this evening that Fort Sumter had been assaulted and captured by the South Carolina troops. It could be traced to no reliable source. News of such an event, however, would not at any moment create unusual surprise here. The plan of attack, as divulged, is to dismantle schooners and convert them into floating batteries, then with cotton bales, and the vessels being towed under the walls of the fort, the cotton bags are to be piled one upon another until a sufficient height is reached to enable the sailing parties to step over the walls. It is believed that the fort can be taken by this process at less sacrifice of life than by any other means.

The friends of the Union are much discouraged by the news from Pensacola and Charleston. A collision is imminent, and the fear is it has already occurred. Once began, it is idle to talk of compromise. Whatever may have been the criminal folly that prompted the attack, the appalling consequences are to precipitate at once all the central slave States into the vortex of revolution.

The policy now talked of among leading Union men is to call on the President to evacuate Fort Sumter and Fort Pickens, and thus remove all opportunity for the seceding States inaugurating civil war, and carrying off the central States with them.

The President is known to be opposed to the withdrawal of the troops, but the representations that will be made to him by many true men at the South, and to avoid civil war it is thought by many he may be induced to do it.

In the House the Deficiency bill was laid aside to give Mr. Adams, of Massachusetts, an opportunity to respond to the many appeals that have been made to him, from Southern gentlemen, to express his views on the present condition of the country. Southern members, with few exceptions, gathered over toward the republican side, in the centre of which Mr. Adams stood, and some of the extreme Southern fire-eaters were attracted so imperceptibly towards him that they actually found themselves occupying the seats of the black republicans. The galleries were crowded with ladies and gentlemen, who listened with breathless attention. Shortly after Mr. Adams commenced, Edward Everett was escorted to a seat near the former, on the republican side of the House, by Mr. Burlingame. When Mr. Adams concluded nearly all the republican members and several of the South American ones and congratulated him. After the crowd left Mr. Everett approached Mr. Adams and took him very cordially by the hand, thanked him for his speech, and said he could endorse very nearly the whole of it. Mr. Adams' expression, that the "proposition of the Committee of Thirty-three is a fair one," and that he is willing to accede to whatever in reason will be agreed upon by the border States, is taken as a generous and Statesmanlike offer. Upon the basis of the border States proposition, or pledge, the one submitted by Mr. Adams in the Committee of Thirty-three, the country can rest assured that Mr. Adams has not cut himself aloof from all his radical friends in New England, and made this step forward without consultation with Mr. Seward and others, who have the confidence of Mr. Lincoln.

It is a significant fact that Mr. Seward sustains Mr. Adams in the speech the latter made.—N. Y. Herald.

Garibaldi to Unsheath his Sword Again in March.

The Amico della Liberta, a Reggio journal, publishes a letter addressed by Garibaldi in November last, to some Neapolitans who urged him at once to return to Naples. It entirely confirms the general rumor that the ex-Dictator intends to resume his sword in the month of March. Garibaldi says: "Why do you needlessly call for me? Allow me for a few months that rest of body and mind which I require, as a preparation for the new labors, the new fatigues, and the new sufferings which await me. But all this is nothing; it is Italy that is in question, and to Italy my life is consecrated. Rome and Venice expect thy aid. They belong to Italy, their citizens are her brethren, and they yet groan under the hard yoke of Austria and of priests. Let me recruit myself for the great storm that threatens. Let reason and fraternal philanthropy second your love for me. I will be with in your months. You shall see me again, but I shall require a proof of your love. If you really love me, which I do not doubt, follow me, my dear fellow citizens—follow me, when we shall unite to deliver our brethren of Rome and beautiful Venice. Then, contented and united, we will constitute an Italy, one and independent, under the sceptre of the King galant' uome Victor Emanuel. Adieu! At the end of March we will embrace each other."

The pious apothegm, "man proposes, but God disposes," seems likely to meet a signal verification in the experiment now making in the southern states to strengthen the institution of slavery by intrenching it behind the supposed overmastering necessity of the commercial world for a supply of southern cotton. This vaunted "king" may be dethroned by the very means adopted to enforce allegiance to its usurped authority. Providence, which from "seeming evil still educes good," seems likely to convert the blind and infuriate zeal of the secessionists into an instrument for giving success to rival cotton plantations in other quarters of the globe, and thus subverting a monstrous monopoly which has long been felt to be the main prop of slavery. We propose to trace the operation of the commercial causes, and indicate some of the steps by which this result may be brought about.

The South asserts that England must have its cotton; that four millions of British subjects depend for daily employment and daily bread on a supply of this important commodity; that the cotton manufacture of Great Britain is so interwoven with other branches of industry and trade that its forced suspension would cause a general unhingement of business, to be followed by extensive riots of unemployed and starving workmen, and resulting in the overthrow of the government. It is on this assumption that the Charleston Mercury, in one of its last numbers that have reached us, talks in this defiant strain: "Let the patriots and planters of the South keep back their cotton. In March Europe will need supplies. *Your ports are blockaded,
