PITTSBURGH:
SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 23, 1861.

THE SPIRIT OF THE SOUTH.

That proscription is the openly-avowed spirit of the new Confederacy no reader of their newspapers—no traveller who has sojourned within their borders—can doubt. But the flagrancy of some things that have been reported—the very flagrancy itself—seemed to render them incredible. The people of the North, and the whole civilized world with them, because such things could not possibly be true in any form of society with the conditions of which they are acquainted, can not realize that such a barbarous spirit of proscription as the following extract from the New Orleans Delta exhibits, should be the ordinary every-day state of feeling in any community under any supposable conditions. But how is the wonder increased when we learn that those conditions are not only endured as merely tolerable, but cherished as the best, and a wild enthusiasm excited in their behalf, whose strenuous efforts will be put forth to make them perpetual. We quote from the Delta:

"It should be recollected that in New Orleans, even before Louisiana had seceded, Lincoln's portrait was not tolerated, and an indiscreet Austrian peddler came near being hanged for offering a miniature of the President elect for sale!"

The same paper also declares that any man who would retard or weaken the secession movement is a traitor, who should be driven from our borders.

"I noticed," says the correspondent of a New York paper, "only yesterday, in two provincial papers of this State, a direct intimation that the publication of another interior paper, which still owns allegiance to the Federal Union, should not longer be permitted in Louisiana. A Mississippi organ expresses the wish that George D. Prentice, of the Louisville Journal, who is a thorn, in fact a whole forest of thorns, in the side of secession, should visit this section. 'We want,' says the editor, with the peculiar mildness of the South, 'to see a performance on the tight rope!'"

MR. SHERMAN.

The election of Mr. Sherman to the Ohio Senatorship, rendered vacant by Mr. Chase's acceptance of a seat in the Cabinet, is an event which we hear announced with mingled feelings of satisfaction and regret. On the whole, perhaps, our satisfaction predominates, for no worthier successor could have been designated by the State of Ohio, in all the array of her worthiest sons, to succeed Mr. Chase. Still, when we remember the efficient services which Mr. Sherman has rendered to the country as Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, we feel there is reason to regret that his valuable services cannot be available any longer in that important sphere of legislative activity where he has won the respect and gratitude of all good men. On the principle, however, of rendering honor to whom honor is due, it was well for Ohio to elect Mr. Sherman to the Senate—and in the honor thus conferred, every patriot will concur in pronouncing it well deserved.

ARKANSAS NOT SECEDED.

The report of the vote in the Arkansas Convention sent here by the agent of the Associated Press, and which appeared in the Gazette and the other morning papers, seems to be told like that story which a certain farmer is reported to have told a neighboring lawyer—in which the farmer puts the case of an ox which had been gored, but reserves the ownership. Whether the party who sent the report to Pittsburgh had any ulterior view, such as the farmer had, we cannot tell; but whether or not, we do not like such things by telegraph. The New York papers contain telegraphic despatches from Van Buren and Fort Smith, Arkansas, and from Nashville, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., all of the same tenor as the following, which, therefore, we presume we may accept in correction of the dispatch sent here:

Great excitement has prevailed at Little Rock, Ark., following the rejection of the Secession ordinance.

A compromise has been made that the people should vote on the first Monday in August next for co-operation or Secession.

Delegates are to be sent to the Border State Convention, and report on the reassembling of the Convention on the third Monday in August.

BARBARISM.

The Secessionists of Louisiana stole the money in the mint at New Orleans, most of which was private property. This rendered them justly liable to the appellation of thieves. They seized the U. S. Hospital, and turned the sick and disabled out, thus showing themselves to be barbarians. But some of the Secession authorities of Texas have reached a lower depth of dastardly meanness than any of their compatriots. A fellow named Sherman, at the head of a Vigilance Committee, seized, a few days since, a vessel loaded with oil for the purpose of supplying the light-houses along the Gulf coast. The heart sickens at the thought of the disasters that may occur to the shipping along that dangerous coast for want of the lights which this oil would have afforded. The English language has no term sufficiently strong to characterize such an act. An ordinary savage would scorn so diabolical a deed, did he understand; as these fellows did, the consequences of the robbery.

"O, SI SIC OMNES!"

At Albany, New York, they have begun house-cleaning. A dirty fellow who had tried to obtain a bribe of fifty dollars for some legislative work which he was ready to do for hire, has been swept out. It would be a wholesome thing to do a little of this house-cleaning, at present, in several other places besides Albany. What would be the objection if some parties at Harrisburg would take a hint from the following:

The Select Committee of the New York Assembly on the case of Mr. Jay Gibbons, a member from Albany county, charged with bribery, yesterday reported a resolution to the effect that Mr. Gibbons "has been guilty of official misconduct, rendering him unworthy of a seat in this House, and should therefore be expelled."

THE order for the withdrawal of Major Anderson had not been given at our latest advices, but it is believed that it cannot be much longer delayed. His fuel and light are believed to have been exhausted, and the stock of provisions is low. Buchanan's truce lost the nation this fort; for while it was a truce on his part, it was a time of the most active preparation for war on the part of the Secessionists, and the result has been this unavoidable humiliation of the national government.

EXPLANATORY.

In Thursday's Dispatch a correspondent enquires in regard to the votes of Messrs. Moorhead and Mr. Knight on the postponement of Mr. Stanton's volunteer bill, and tries to convey the impression that the temporary postponement was a test vote, and equivalent to a defeat. Mr. McKnight publishes the following in answer to that charge:

"How and Why They Voted.—Messrs. Editors Dispatch: It is not my custom to notice anonymous communications, but as an article of that character in this morning's Dispatch receives your unqualified endorsement, and as I learn the same erroneous impression exists in the minds of others, I take this opportunity to say that Mr. Stanton's bill, authorizing the President to call out volunteers, had my hearty approbation and support. There are often reasons of policy operating on the minds and controlling the votes of Representatives not known to others, and it does not seem unreasonable to allow them some little discretion.

"The record not being within reach, I can not give you the names and dates, but Mr. Stanton called up his bill on the day fixed for organizing the new Territories of Colorado, Nevada, and Dacotah. The Appropriation and other important bills were also pressing at that late period of the session. The Democracy, in caucus, had conspired, to defeat this measure (stigmatized wrongly as a force bill) by the usual parliamentary strategy, consuming the residue of the session—all which you are aware we were powerless to prevent. Knowing this, many of us were anxious to rescue from the wreck all the important measures we could. Believing the postponement for two days would accomplish this, and aid the final passage of Stanton's bill, I voted with Mr. Grow to take up his territorial bill, thus leaving the way clear for Stanton's bill, which I afterwards sustained, not only by my vote, but by earnest appeals to our South American friends, on whom I urged that they were committing a great blunder in not making with us to promptly pass this prudential measure, strengthening the hands of the Executive, and enabling him to vanquish treason and rebellion.

"The vote alluded to was not a test vote, but when the bill next came up I voted for it, and deeply regretted its failure, though well aware Mr. Buchanan was pledged to veto it. Yours, &c., ROBERT McKNIGHT."

FROM HARRISBURG.

[Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

HARRISBURG, March 21, 1861.

EDS. GAZETTE:—In the Senate, to-day, Mr. Irish called up bill to enable the Citizens' Passenger Railway to build a branch to East Liberty, which passed and was sent to the House.

Mr. Penney introduced a bill supplementary to the charter of the Pittsburgh Gas Company, which passed and goes to the House. It authorizes the choice of Directors from any part of Alleghany county.

The following western bills also passed:

House bill relative to the sale of lands for taxes in the borough of Connellsville.

House bill to incorporate the Girard Cemetery, Erie county.

House bill relative to the claim of Chas. Carter.

House bill to enable Elizabeth White to make title to certain real estate.

House bill relative to the School District of Shelocta, Indiana county.

House bill extending the time for completing the New Castle and New Wilmington plank road.

In the House, the morning was occupied almost exclusively in presenting petitions, reading bills, and receiving reports of Committees. The afternoon session was devoted to the appropriation bill, which will probably get through this week.

The prospect for an early adjournment is not bright. The middle of April is the earliest day named.

The Folly of Texas.

Perhaps there is no other one of the seceding States which has exhibited in that action such egregious and marvellous folly as has marked the course of Texas. While she was yet independent, her precarious and impoverished condition was evident to all outside observers, and so deeply felt by her public men that they threatened to seek the protection of some strong European Power, if the United States refused the State admission into the Union. Yielding to the apprehension that this anomalous connexion might indeed occur, and complicate our southern frontier with foreign occupation, the United States consented to receive the forlorn State, and enlarge the lone star in our constellation.

Strenuous was the opposition to this doubtful measure. Confidently did its opponents predict that a war with Mexico must inevitably follow, and as positively did southern men and their northern allies assure us there was no such danger. Texas was admitted, and we assumed her debts, amounting to more than eight millions of dollars.

What ensued? Mexico could not brook this annexation of her former province. The war which was said to happen did happen nevertheless. Perhaps forty millions more were spent in the arduous conflict, and thousands of our soldiers were slain or maimed, while as many more perished by disease. We planted our banners in the city of Mexico, and were embarrassed by our very conquest. We were glad to beg or buy a peace, and gave fifteen millions of dollars to the vanquished enemy for large tracts of territory of doubtful value, and afterwards ten millions more for another unnecessary slice.

Texas was ours—and a dear bargain has it been to her Union. Hugs were the outlays to her behalf in the first instance, and heavy as well as numberless have they been in each succeeding year. Seven millions of dollars were paid her for alleged territorial rights in New Mexico, relating to sterile or mountainous tracts, scarcely worth as much as a hundred-acre farm in Pennsylvania. Millions more were expended to protect her from Mexicans and Indians, and a very large portion of the Federal army was directly employed in this onerous service.

And now, forgetting or ignoring all these things, Texas revolts from that central government, whose every action towards her has been that of bounteous benefaction, and joins in a league of rebellious States, only less ungrateful and unwise than herself.

Henceforth Texas must defend herself. With a State revenue only one-third of her ordinary expenditure, with an empty treasury and a total lack of credit in any money mart, she dismisses twenty-five hundred Federal troops who were protecting her at the national expense, and voluntarily assumes the crushing burden of an annual expenditure for this purpose alone whose annual amount must be summed up by millions. A navy for coast defence must likewise be improvised by this government without an exchequer, unless she be content to await the action of the Montgomery congress, and see if the armaments of that august power will arrive in time for her defence.

The history of mankind exhibits innumerable acts of folly approaching to insanity, but we doubt if in all that long list there can be found an act of infatuation more stupendous than this.—[North American.

Fort Pickens.

Gen. Bragg, of the Army of the "Confederate States," is now in camp before Pickens, preparing to re-enact there the scene of Charleston harbor during the last three months. No matter how expensive his warlike preparations, or how fierce his professions, Mr. Davis is a sagacious man, and is cool and prudent until his vanity is piqued or pride of opinion wounded. He is evidently anxious to avoid giving the first blow,—for he understands full well that while it is safe to deny in violent terms the right of the Federal Government to "coerce a sovereign State," his own people are not yet quite up to the point of readiness to sustain him in coercing the Federal Government. Now, suppose Sumpter abandoned, for the military reasons already indicated—in that case Mr. Davis must besiege Fort Pickens. Then Mr. Lincoln must needs reinforce and supply that post, which can easily be done, as the way is open from the sea, and comparatively safe. Mr. Davis, in such event, must starve out Lieut. Slemmer, as he starved out Major Anderson, or he must attack the fort. Will he attack Fort Pickens? Probably not, as the Administration desires peace—while Mr. Davis also evidently prefers it, and the Commissioners from the Southern Confederacy are here, endeavoring to obtain a solution of the impending difficulties in such manner as to avoid war. But the investment of Fort Pickens will cost a great deal of money; and if our Government maintains it, the operations of the Secessionists in that quarter will prove an exhausting seton, running away with their money a good deal faster than their people like to furnish it.

It is safe to conclude that the commercial and monetary classes of the North, interested in the protection of our Gulf commerce, need entertain no fear that either Pensacola harbor or Key-West will be abandoned by Mr. Lincoln to the Confederate States,—to become the rendezvous of letters of marque, and from which private armed ships may sally out for the capture of our California treasure and steamers. England sets us a good example in retaining Gibralter and Malta. Fort Sumpter has no such value, and can be spared; while forts Taylor and Pickens are invaluable for the protection of our commerce, and must be maintained at every cost, just as long as supplies and reinforcements can be put into them. Pickens evidently was reinforced by the Brooklyn, and now must contain some three hundred well disciplined men. —Cor. N. Y. Times.

Compliment to Gen. Cameron—Handsome Speech by Gen. Moorhead.

At the time of the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln, there was a large delegation of Pennsylvanians in Washington, embracing many of our most prominent, worthy and influential men. Getting into a body, these gentlemen paid visits of respect to the President, Gen. Scott, Secretary Holt and other worthy men, and among them Gen. Cameron. The General however, was absent attending to his duties in the Senate when the delegation called at his rooms. But Gen. Moorhead, whose rooms adjoin Gen. Cameron's, with a cleverness that did him great credit, appeared for him, and in Cameron's name thanked the delegation for their compliment. Alluding to the fact that they had called to congratulate Gen. Cameron on his appointment to a place in the cabinet, Mr. Moorhead said that that appointment, "though a high honor, was not a promotion of its recipient. He had gained his laurels as a faithful representative of Pennsylvania in the Senate; and the great protective measure which had just become a law, and for which General Cameron had toiled unflinchingly for sixteen years, would be remembered to his honor when the highest honors he might earn in the wise administration of the office to which he had just been appointed should be forgotten."—Hollidaysburg Register.

A WRIGHTY DECISION.—The Supreme Court of California (Judges Field, Cope, and Baldwin) has affirmed the judgment of the Court below, whereby it was established that the owner of land in California under a patent from the United States owns all that grows upon or is buried within that land—owns from the centre of gravity to the top of the highest tree—the same as in our older States. In 1859, that same Court decided that the minerals imbedded in such lands belonged to the State, by virtue of Spanish-Mexican law and the principle of Eminent Domain. That decision is now completely reversed, by a unanimous decision rendered on the 16th ult; and the right of the owner of the soil to the minerals contained therein is declared absolute. The parties litigant were Moore against Shaw and Fremont against Flower, and the point may now be considered settled.—[Tribune.

SCULPTURE.—Miss Lander, of Salem, Mass., who studied the plastic art in Rome, as a pupil of the lamented Crawford, has of late been in Baltimore and Washington, modelling several busts, among them, one of her brother, Col. F. W. Lander, the well-known civil engineer.

GEO F. WRIGHT, a portrait painter, of Hartford, Connecticut, has been employed by the State of Illinois to paint the portrait of President Lincoln for its Capitol. The appropriation for the work is $2,500.

THE article in the "Atlantic Monthly," for April, entitled "The Reign of King Cotton," is from the pen of Charles Francis Adams, Jr.

AS a proof of how full Washington is, two thousand two hundred persons dined at Willard's Hotel on Monday.
