PITTSBURGH:

TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 9, 1861.

THE IMPENDING CRISIS.

Ever since December last, when the storm of secession burst forth, the government, until within a few days, has seemed to be dead. The country was becoming dissatisfied and disconraged, first with the treason of the Buchanan administration, and then with the apparent inaction of the present one. But it is in motion now. The vibrations of the ponderous machinary of the government have reached men's ears, and cheered their hearts; for they now feel assured that the Ship of State is not going to be driven upon the rocks.

The actively prevailing both in the army and navy proves that Mr. Lincoln is now ready to enforce the laws, and, as far as possible, arrest the progress of treason. Some think that he intends to reinforce and hold on to Fort Sumter. How this is we cannot tell. It is well, however, for obvious reasons, to let that idea get abroad; for it will keep some two or three thousand rebel troops now around Charleston harbor from doing mischief any where else. No doubt it is thought to be practicable to hold it, without a sacrifice of life out of all proportion to its importance, it will be held; but if abandoned, it will be done on purely military grounds.

Pickens will be defended to the last extremity; and from all we can learn of its strength, we think there is no danger of its reduction.

Very properly the most profound secrecy is maintained respecting the destination of the vessels and troops which have just left New York. The apprehension that they are to reinforce Sumter keeps the people of Charleston in the greatest excitement, while those who are beleaguering Pickens are kept equally excited lest the blow may fall there. Other rumors and conjectures assign the fleet to the mouths of the Mississippi, to blockade New Orleans; while others, with quite as good a show of probability, have it that this formidable force is to be placed at the command of Governor Houston to enable him to recover the authority of which the Legislature of Texas has deprived him, but the right to which he has not surrendered. Thus, by this deep and politic alliance as to its intentions, the Administration has put the secessionists in a most awkward position. They know that a blow at their usurped authority is coming; but they cannot tell where it may fall. The small military force at their command is scattered along a coast line of a thousand miles; but they dare not move a regiment; for the blow may be struck at Charleston, or at the mouth of the Mississippi, or in Texas.

The country may rest assured, that, while no unnecessary or wanton act of hostility will be committed on the part of the government, the President will let those people know that there is a government, and that its laws will be executed—that it will require something far more substantial than a convocation of traitors, and a vote, to set them aside, and that he meant what he said when he delivered his Inaugural.

So far as the Northern people are concerned, all they desire is to see the government moving—see it putting forth its power, see it assert its authority and maintain its supremacy; for the idea that it was going to be a passive, unresisting victim of the foulest and most ungrateful treason was horrible.

We hope that Virginia will now find her proper level, and that her "stand and deliver" sons of counsel, or rather dictation, will hereafter be treated with just as much consideration as it merits, which will certainly not be very much

THE TABLES TURNED.

The vociferous cry of "The Union, the Constitution and the Enforcement of the Laws," kept up in 1860 by those who opposed the election of Mr. Lincoln, has since been changed by those who then used it, for that of "No Coercion," which, being interpreted according to the rules of common sense, means "No Union, no Constitution, no Enforcement of the Laws." In 1860 the prime object of the cry was the prompt capture and return of fugitive slaves; but in 1861 it is taken up by the very men against whom it was directed as a lying insinuation less than a year ago, and there is both reason and force in their use of it; for since then, many of the very men who made such loud professions of their fidelity to the Union, the Constitution and the Laws, have broken up the Union, trampled the Constitution under their feet, and are this day arrayed in open defiance of the laws. If a negro was rescued by men whose natural sympathies revolted against the execution of a statute which required the poor trembling wretch to be carried back to bondage and the lash, those men who are now steeped to the lips in treason, together with their Northern sympathizers and allies, hold up their hands in holy horror at such a terrible infraction of law, and such treason to the Union. Now, however, when every conceivable form of hostility to the government and the laws are openly and boldly practiced—courts abolished, custom houses seized, forts, arsenals and navy yards taken possession of and turned against the government; when treason of the boldest and rankest kind has banished all law from a large portion of the country, we must bear it all meekly—there must be no coercion—it will never do to talk about enforcing the laws—it will offend our "Southern brethren"—it may drive Virginia out of the Union—it may lead to bloodshed!

We have had too much of that kind of talk; and it is high time that a determined stand were taken by every man, who is not a traitor at heart, to stand up for the Union, the Constitution and the enforcement of the Laws, and we rejoice to believe that we have a man at the head of the nation who will be faithful to the great duties imposed upon him.

The secret, first put in circulation by one of the New York newspapers, that move agents met to England and France by the Administration immediately after it came into power, have returned, bringing most explicit assurances that the Governments of those countries are hostile to the Slave Confederacy, and will in no manner recognize or countenance it, can hardly be correct. Sufficient time has not elapsed since the fourth of March to allow such agents to make the journey and communicate with the Governments of England and France, which the newspaper of this report as true would presuppose. But it is altogether improbable, as the N. Y. Tribune remarks, that any such agents have been sent, for the simple reason that ample means are possessed by the Administration of learning the intentions of England and France without employing secret agents, and it has been well known from the beginning that the slaveholders possess no hold whatever on the sympathy or respect of any part of the civilized world. Their only possible allies are Alabama, Dahomey, and the Democratic politicians of the North.

NORTHERN PEOPLE WITH A SOUTHERN PLATFORM.—The following was passed at a recent meeting in New Rochelle, New York:

Resolved, That the Democracy of New Rochelle adopt as their party platform the constitution of the seven Southern Confederated States.

FURNISHING OF THE PRESIDENTIAL MANSION.—Great competition exists among Philadelphia, New York and Boston merchants to furnish the White House. Mr. Nichol, of the firm of Houghwout & Co., New York, is said here, and told us yesterday that he was in correspondence with Mrs. Lincoln, who will shortly visit New York, and has engaged Mr. Nichol to supply the plate to be furnished for the grand entertainments of the President. She patriotically insisted that the arms of the United States should embellish all the plate she had ordered.—Phila. Press.

FROM HARRISBURG.

[Special Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

HARRISBURG, April 5, 1861.

Ed. Gazette:—In the House, to-day, the House bill to elect an additional Law Judge in the District Court of Allegheny county, was negatived, the Senate bill for the same purpose being on the same calendar, and among the bills first reached when the calendar is again taken up.

A bill to take away from the Supreme Court the power to appoint inspectors of the Penitentiaries, east and west, and Guardians of the Poor in Philadelphia, was passed to third reading; but the minority set in to filibuster, and by making dilatory motions until the hour of adjournment, succeeded in adjourning the House, under the rules; until Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

During the struggle some hot words passed between Dr. Saltzer and Mr. Randall, of Philadelphia, and it is rumored to-night that Randall has challenged Saltzer.

The bill will probably pass on Monday. It comes upon the Governor the power to appoint the Inspectors of the Penitentiaries.

In the Senate, the following bills from the House passed finally:

To incorporate the Juniata Valley Railroad Company.

To incorporate the Shawnist Canal Coal Company.

To enable the Commissioners of Beaver county to borrow money.

To incorporate the Pittsburgh and Brownsville Turnpike Company.

To establish a ferry over the Allegheny, at McCrea's, Venango county.

Supplement to the act incorporating the Ebensburg and Indiana Turnpike Company.

Also, the following Senate bills, which have yet to be acted on in the House:

An act for the more efficient collection of debts due the Commonwealth.

A further supplement to the act to incorporate the Monongahela (Birmingham) Water Company.

An act relating to the Altoona Fairview Cemetary Association.

A supplement to the act incorporating the Monongahela Passenger Railway Company.

A supplement to the act for the protection of persons navigating the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers. Extends the act to bridges above Elizabeth.

An act to enable the county of Allegheny to compromise with the bondholders.

Supplement to the act incorporating the Youghiogheny Navigation Co.

An act reassuring the farms of McCullough and Williamson to the Coolspring School district, Mercer county.

A similar act assuring the farm of W. W. Corbett to Rockville, Jefferson county.

An act to authorize the examination of the claim of Charles Miller.

The Senate has also adjourned until Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

E.

Breckinridge at Home.

HE TRIES TO SOW SECESSION IN KENTUCKY.

The Hon. John C. Breckinridge having done his best in the United States Senate to promote southern treason, on Tuesday last declared a secession harangue before the Legislature of Kentucky. In this speech he delivered himself ready to leave any one who would not come over to his ground; denied that this is a government of the people; advocated the right of any state to "judge for itself of the mode and measure of redress," and protested with much feeling against hanging as a punishment for treason.

He admitted that the North do not desire or mean to effect immediately emancipation; but stated that the amendment passed by Congress, against interference with slavery in the states, "means disunion—permanent separation of the seceded states." He complained that the Administration chose for its servants anti-slavery men—as though the government had not been long enough going to ruin and disgrace in the hands of the proslavery men. He declined to say what would be his course should Kentucky free herself of the Union without uniting herself with the cotton states. He urged the people to have another vote on the question of the Union or secession; but would not commit himself to rest satisfied with the result, unless the majority should prove "distinct."

Finally, he proposed to "settle the question upon the high level of constitutional right," by holding a border state conference, to whose decisions he thought the North should submit, though he doubted if the cotton states would.

Such speeches as this will only strengthen the already overwhelming Union sentiment in Kentucky. The Frankfort "Commonwealth says:

"The Union Democracy of Kentuck will never subscribe to such a doctrine."

Interesting from Baltimore.

The recent energetic measures taken on the part of the Government have been hailed with satisfaction by the people of the country everywhere. The People yet own a country with a government, though anarchists and traitors have conspired and sought to disorganize both. In a letter from Baltimore, dated the 5th inst., which appears in the N. Y. Tribune of Saturday, we find the following:

Things are rapidly verging toward a conflict, if the Rebels are in earnest. The days are not many ere they will encounter the majesty and power of the Federal Government in a way they little dream of. If they resist, the blood be upon their heads.

The fatal blow which Rebellion has received in the Virginia Convention, and the terrible majority of 44 against the ordinance of Secession, has vibrated through every nerve of the social and political system of our city this morning. There's an end of Rebellion in the Border Slave States, from hence forward and forever, upon the negro question.

The President has marched square up to his responsibility, and woe unto those who shall dare encounter it? Fort Sumter will not be surrendered to Rebels, nor will Fort Pickens. There's no need of saying more. Let the facts of the future tell the tale. It will be a peaceful one, if the Rebels will it. If not, so'.

Gen. Scott has completely handed off the Rebel McCullough, who has taken to his hooks and bought safety in the wilds of Texas. Wigfall is not far behind him. The time is not very far off, when the ringleaders will seek an asylum over the seas. Such a pin there!

The advertisements of Mr. Saegar, the would-be Postmaster General of the pretended Montgomery Government, for stamps, mail-bags, locks and keys, &c., must excite the liability of your cool-headed contractors. Are they to be caught by such chaff as this? If they are, they are more inexperienced than I take them to be.

A large body of good and true men have left this State, to rally to the standard of the Union under old Sam Houston.

The Judicial Convention, to assemble at the Court House to nominate a President Judge of Common Pleas, an Associate Law Judge of Common Pleas, and an Associate Judge of Common Pleas, one Senator, and five members of the House of Representatives, Auditors and Directors of the Poor. 2.
