

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 1. attempts to assassinate Lincoln and other agents of the government.

It is said that the police have received precious information that a plot has been in existence among a class of persons in this city to assassinate the Citizen President, and that an attempt will be made to do so.

A letter from Louisville, Kentucky, reports to give the details of the plot, which says that the parties concerned were in touch with the order of the "Knights of the Golden Circle". The latter says:

"A secret and well-contrived plot is now in operation to burn New York, Philadelphia and Boston; a portion of the men assumed to your city are already in your city, and others are on their way."

"I say to the public, tell you how such a plot would lead to my inevitable detention, the consequences of which you can readily guess."

The intention is to fire the three cities in as many places as possible, and at the same hour. This is to be done the night before the attack on Washington.

"One hundred and twenty men have been assigned to your city, and Brooklyn, and eighty to each of the others.
This is not a moment of the greatest danger, but when the plot is discovered, it will be time for Lincoln's assassination.

He has withdrawn his opposition.

The plan has been hatching for two months but did not include New York, because the agents who had adopted it had to go to New York.

They have been at their posts for a week, but the determination to include New York has caused a delay, and now they are ready to strike.

"I have told them I have told you, but all that can with safety to myself."

The chances are you will discover the plot before it is carried out, but if you do not, the world will be at your feet."

"I am your friend; I am one of the most unfeeling of your enemies; but I am an open and, I hope, an honorable foe."

To fight him, to burn him, with梯 and campfire."

Do not let the people of the South the injection to believe that one out of ten among them would be a moment sensation in the forgotten scheme. It is indeed, the tale appears too unanswerable or brief.

-N. Y. Cour.

More About the Legend of the Navy

From the "Times" of the N. Y. "Times" written from Washington:

"I had a conversation with the Secretary of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is a part of the legacy of treachery and incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to place our New-Yards under old and timid men, who were loyal, at all that was desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things to expect, or what the condition of the legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make preparations for getting so much of the material as was possible out, as well as the explosives in the last emergency, to be used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he was bullied and frightened by his young superior officers, and he was compelled to leave the command of the ship to town with the rest of the Confederates, as he had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to

place our New-Yards under old and timid
men, who were loyal, at all that was
desirable, is well known.

The Administration, however, had only been in
power six weeks when this occurred—
and they did not know what state of things
to expect, or what the condition of the
legal fiction to be preserved, that the Border States were loyal,

and the few constantly of us up to that
time were in full sympathy with them.

When the news came that Floyd had been
removed, and that he had been sent to the South, the demand for his recall was
instantaneous, and it was made.

These were their difficulties. Norfolk
was not a defensible position according
to any theory, and the rebels had to make
preparations for getting so much of the
material as was possible out, as well as the
explosives in the last emergency, to be
used in case of an attempt to retake it.

He obeyed the first order throughly; he
was bullied and frightened by his young
superior officers, and he was compelled
to leave the command of the ship to town
with the rest of the Confederates, as he
had no choice but to do so.

He had a conversation with the Secretary
of the Navy on this very matter last night.
I can give you, perhaps some explanation
of the unfortunate affair."

The whole calamity, I believe, is
a part of the legacy of treachery and
incompetency bequeathed to us by the last Administration. The failure of the wise and
skillful plan of Floyd and his associates to