PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 15, 1861.

Some General Remarks.

From the present appearance of things we think there will not be very much fighting. There may be one general battle somewhere in Eastern Virginia, probably at Richmond. The Secession forces are collecting in considerable numbers around Norfolk, and it may require some heavy work to dislodge them, provided the government sees proper to attack them; but as the ports there are thoroughly blockaded, it only requires the occupation of the country in their rear to render their position untenable for the want of supplies. We think, therefore, that the government will permit them to stay there, where the only harm they can do is to eat out the substance of the worst secessionists in Virginia. In that way the evil can be made to cure itself.

It is probable that the first active operations will be at Harper's Ferry, that being a point of great strategical importance, for it commands not only the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, but the principal entrance to the great valley of the Shenandoah. It is said that the rebel troops have possession of the Maryland Heights, on the Maryland side of the Potomac, opposite Harper's Ferry, a very strong position, and which must first be taken before it will be possible to occupy the confined valley in which the village and the armory are situated, and through which the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad passes. But let those Heights once be captured by our troops and that moment the secession forces at Harper's Ferry must evacuate or surrender. There may, therefore, be some hard work at that place. The strong camp established by Gen. Scott at the Relay House is the base of operations for the reduction of this only stronghold of the Secessionists.

Washington is on all hands regarded as safe; but there are not yet troops enough there to carry on offensive operations with any degree of energy. They are still pouring in, however, and we may hope that in a short time there will be force enough to shut the Secessionists in. With the ports thoroughly blockaded, as they are, and with a sufficient force along the line of the Potomac and the Ohio, to keep it from making any aggressive movements, treason may be made to eat out its own vitals. This is one view; but it is not one that will satisfy the country. This job of crushing this thing out has got to be done, and there are three or four hundred thousand men ready to go and do it, if they can only get permission.

This outbreak of treason and war is something like a fire. It may do sometimes to confine a conflagration to certain limits; but people are not inclined to return to their usual avocations until they see it extinguished.

We have all seen the effect of an overwhelming force upon secession in Maryland. It looked very formidable for a few days; and really had the State been located any where else than on the road to the capital, it would have been swept off. But the mere necessity of saving Washington saved Maryland, and proved to the world that Secession is rather a thing of noise and fury than of solid substance.

THE PRESENT AND THE FUTURE.

"OCCASIONAL," the well-known editor of the Philadelphia Press, in a letter written to that journal from Washington, thus eloquently speaks of the wonderful present through which we are now passing, and of the promise it holds out of a glorious future, toward which an over-ruling Providence is leading us:

I often wish to be inspired with superhuman energy and genius in order to collate the facts and to describe the scenes that mark the era in which we are living. Every part of our country has its own heroes, its own evidences of patriotism and disinterestedness; and were the historian's pen to could help to fill up the general picture with the dark shadows of its own self-inflicted woes, and well-invited and rapidly approaching defeat. What a wonderful spectacle we present to mankind and to the future! Nothing in the world's history has ever equalled this awakening of a nation from the deepest recess of the ocean of public opinion to the loftiest heights of religious devotion. It is worth all the blood that may flow, even if it should run in torrents through generations of time, if only because of the noble elements of human nature it has called forth. Who will not sneer his calumnies upon man when he sees twenty millions displaying the attributes of the gods? There is no exception, save where insanity or hatred has extinguished the natural affections. The whole surface of the loyal States is covered as with a mantle of love of country. Every heart seems to have been suddenly filled with a new emotion. It is as if that God whom we have so often invoked to save this land from death, had, when despair was making faith in Him almost a myth, come forth and breathed into our people a spark of his own celestial fire. For, is not this marvelous scene too marvelous to result from the exertions of his own creatures? He has spoken. He has given us this great power. He has armed us with new weapons. We have indeed fulfilled the adage, that the "Voice of the people is the voice of God." The miracle of miracles has transpired. The mysterious decree of Providence has pronounced our Union perpetual by providing a remedy for its preservation. Our foes have not only been baffled, but over-awed and stupefied. Like the liar who fell dead with his falsehood in his throat—like the drunken Belshazzar at his feast—like the doomed hosts of Nineveh and of Sodom—they have been admonished by that which may be called the almost visible manifestation of the wrath of an offended Deity. For whether they surrender now or not, they must yield soon and forever. I wonder how those men of God in the South, while I pity them from my soul who preach on the side of treason, will read the singular demonstration of the interposition of their great Master in the crisis of our common country. Will they accept it as a warning, or go on defying Him and misleading the people? Mark my prophecy. The next proof of the wondrous Providence of His Presence will be the breaking forth in the slave States of those religious instincts now temporarily deranged and clouded by corrupt men. If there are believers in truth—in Gospel—in the Bible—in honesty—in these States, they will shortly spring from their lethargy and renounce their errors and their betrayers. That region will shortly abound in feuds, suddenly and strangely brought to reason and to light by a message from the skies.

Some of the triumphs of the new revelation that has fallen upon our people are nearly inexplicable. The instant extinction of party feeling is novel enough; the patriotism of the women, natural always, but now sublime; the bravery of the men, from the priest to the publican, from sire to son, would be explained by other causes if it were not so universal and self-pervading. But when you see the miser unlocking his coffers and giving his hoards to his country, flags flying from churches of every creed, and whole populations giving up work and rushing into the army, may we not feel that we are in the hands of God, and that he has become our Protector and our President?

I have been present at some extraordinary meetings during the last six weeks, particularly since Sumter fell. The spirit that moved them was not patriotism merely—it was a religious phrenzy. The songs that were sung were songs of liberty; and not by one, but by all. The Star Spangled Banner has become a chant and a chorus everywhere. It is hymned in churches, shouted in taverns, sounded in the streets, and made familiar to the lips of beauty and the lips of childhood. There is joy and harmony at all these meetings, and a gratitude for blessings received and realized that calls tears from the strongest men, and makes the orator almost a clergyman. As to party feeling, he who shows it is shunned like a plague. We have forgotten all of the past save that which teaches us to love our country, and look only upon the future to save and to fight for her.

And will any man tell me that a people like this are ever to be conquered? They are truly armed, alike in the justice of their cause, the wickedness of their foes, and the favor of Providence.

MARRIED.—Mr. Mortimer Thompson, better known as "Doesticks," was recently married by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, to Miss Grace Eldredge, eldest daughter of "Fanny Fern." The ceremony took place at the residence of James Parton, Esq., the celebrated biographer. The patriotic mother of the bride had an elegant American flag arranged as a canopy, beneath which the happy couple were united.

DREADFUL REVENGE.—Because ex-President Fillmore supports the Union, the School Board of New Orleans, which had previously given a school his name, met in solemn conclave, and passed the following dreadful resolution:

Resolved, That the name of Fillmore be effaced from said school house, and the name of Jefferson Davis be substituted in its stead.

Anniversary of the Pittsburgh & Allegheny Orphans' Asylums.

The Board of Managers of this institution held their annual meeting in Excelsior Hall, Allegheny, yesterday afternoon. The Orphans were present, and contributed to the happiness of the occasion by singing an "Anniversary Hymn," "What's the News," repeating the Lord's Prayer, and as the meeting was dismissed, singing "Red, White and Blue," all of which were very well sung by the children.

Hon. Robert McKnight presided. After prayer by Rev. Hughes, Mr. Wm. Bakewell read the following Reports of the Treasurer and Secretary, which were accepted:

Rev. A. J. Kedsley was then called upon to deliver an address, and the gentleman responded in a very appropriate and eloquent manner.

The following Board of Managers for the ensuing year was then chosen unanimously:

Mrs. Denny, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Brunot, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Childs, Mrs. Hays, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Logan, Mrs. Weyman, Mrs. King, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Campbell, Miss Holmes, Miss Thaw.

The new board was requested to meet at the Asylum on Thursday, May 16th, at 3 o'clock. After which the meeting adjourned.

This truly benevolent institution deserves the active aid and sympathy of our whole community.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The annual meeting of this Society has always been held in troublous times. At one period, fire brought ruin and desolation on our crowded streets and busy manufactories; at another time, Cholera smote our population with its deadly stroke; at a third season of calamity, the cry of scarcity threatened to dry up the resources whence the daily bread of the Orphans was derived. But conflagration and pestilence and famine are commonplace events compared to the present epoch—unexampled in the world's history—when the righteous indignation of a whole people is roused by the wrongs and indignities that have prostrated our flag and menaced our Union.

From the contemplation of the horrors of war—however just that war may be—from the tears of the mothers, and the embraces of the wives, who have gone forth bold as lions to our volunteering, from the clangor of martial music and the thunder of artillery, it is pleasant to turn our thoughts to an anniversary meeting like that now assembled here, and to look at those healthy, happy faces, as yet unconscious to the ills that may await them in future life.

Your Managers rejoice to inform the Society that the past year has been one of prosperity to the objects of your cares. Two instances of death have taken place, but apart from them, the health of the Orphans has been uniformly good.

A legacy of $499 65 has been received by the Treasurer from the estate of the late Thos. Elliot, and one of $475, bequeathed to the Asylum by Mr. McDonald, formerly of Pittsburgh.

Among other donations your Managers would specially notice that of $100 from Wm. Schenley, now in England. Also, repeated mementoes of liberality from that benevolent gentleman, who requests that his name may be withheld.

In accordance with that provision of the will of the late Charles Brewer, Esq., which gives to the Society the sum of $10,000, if the present location is changed within seven years after his death, a lot has been bought in Allegheny, (extending 200 feet on Fremont street; being bounded by Centre street. Many persons contributed liberally to ensure this purchase, which has been completed by a gentleman whose interest in the Orphans' welfare has been often shown.

A fresh instance of the watchfulness of that gracious Providence, in which He has especial reference to the fatherless and the friendless, has been displayed during the fire that occurred at the Asylum, in the month of March. Some gentlemen who were passing that way at nine o'clock at night, saw the smoke rising from the roof, and gave the alarm to the Matron. She snatched the sleeping children from their beds, and handed them out to the kind hearts and strong arms waiting in the hall, who bore them to their homes in the neighborhood, where they were sheltered for the night, and received the sympathy and good offices which their deplorable condition required. Your Managers cannot too strongly express their gratitude to these "friends in need" for their timely succor. Not one child was injured by fright or exposure. The roof was badly burned, and the rooms deluged with water so as to be uninhabitable for a while. Several of the Managers received these homeless ones into their houses; and it cannot be doubted that the remembrance of this visit will long be cherished by the children, as an agreeable episode in their existence. The prompt and efficient aid of the Mayor and citizens of Allegheny, was very gratifying to the Board. One liberal man offered the use of his house, to accommodate the Orphans for as long a time as they might remain.

Your Managers thought it was a good time to introduce the age, when the repairs were made; and have to acknowledge the liberal proposition of the Trustees of the Allegheny Gas Company, that the supply should be given to the Asylum free of charge.

There are 83 children now in the Asylum; 21 have been bound in during the year, and 18 placed in suitable situations. In many cases they have been adopted by the families in which they live. The matron, teacher, and other officers, continue to perform their duties with fidelity and zeal. Dr. Dale is still the honored medical attendant of the Asylum, who have reason to rejoice in the prolongation of his valuable life. The religious training of the children is carefully attended to, both on week days by a Manager, and on the Sabbath.

Your Managers rejoice to have so many juvenile spectators present. Children, at a very early age, receive impressions of sympathy for the bereaved. A case in point occurred last year. Dr. Howard having urged on his audience the duty of remembering the institution at a throne of grace, a little boy who had been here, asked his mother on his return home, if he was old enough to pray for the Orphans, and on her replying to the affirmative, he added a petition to that effect to his stated devotions.

Hoping that similar emotions may be called forth in the hearts of young and old, your Managers retire from office, to give place to their successors in responsibility and in trust.

By order of the Board,

H. W. CAMPBELL, Secretary.

OUR ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

CAMP SCOTT, Sunday, May 12, 1861.

MESSRS. EDITORS—You may think me rather a negligent correspondent, but when one is on general guard, with two on and four off, the individual feels much like snoozing the odd four hours, and if reports are correct, your correspondent is some on the sleep—or cold in the head—all hands agreeing that the snorting or snoring was equal to the noise of a first-class locomotive; but this being the best evidence of good health and a clear conscience, I feel contented.

Just before divine service, your Russell Errett, Esq., made his appearance at officers' quarters, and I had the pleasure of grasping his friendly hand and delivering your letter of the 17th ult., which of course contained the latest news. He appears to be in sound constitution, and from the remarks he made, to enjoy this world fully as well as a "very clever man."

We have just returned from preaching, by Rev. Dr. Marks, of whom I spoke in a former letter. The service was short, only occupying some 35 minutes, all—the sermon adapted perfectly to the occasion, containing that which is essential to the volunteer soldier—good advice. It was listened to with marked attention and the advice will not be lost. Although here in thousands, rough and smooth, there is no one who does not respect the teachings of Holy Writ. At home you would have laughed immoderately at the singing, but I assure you the whole regiment did its best, and if the music is not classical it is heartfelt.

We are all broken in purse and paper, and are indebted to Lieut. R. L. Coltart for furnishing the paper for our correspondence. The State is bully on promises, but confounded mean about keeping them. The three months' enlistments in particular—it came near disorganizing the entire 12th regiment. The most of ours would have enlisted, but we would have lost some of our best men.

Yours, D.

An Incident.

On Saturday a tall, splendid looking man, dressed in the uniform of the Allen Greys, stood conversing with a friend on Broadway. He was entirely unconscious that his superior height was attracting universal attention, until a splendid barouche drove up to the sidewalk, and a young man sprang from it and grasped his hand, saying, "You are the most splendid specimen of humanity I ever saw. I am a Southerner, but my heart is with the Union; If it were not, such noble-looking fellows as yourself would enlist me in the cause." The subject of the remark, although surprised, was perfectly self-possessed, and answered the cordial greeting of the young Southerner with warm enthusiasm. He was several inches above six feet, and his noble, open countenance beamed with the ancient patriotism of the Green Mountain Boys, of which he was so fine a specimen. He had walked fifteen miles from the village of Chittenden to enlist, and was the only representative of that village; but a score in himself. Long may he live to honor our Stars and Stripes.—[N. Y.
