A Revolutionary Relic.

Mr. H. W. Cimiotti, jeweler, of Smithfield street, has now in his possession a gold ring, of curious make, which was worn in this country by a German relative, previous to the Revolutionary war. His friend returned to the Fatherland after the war, and the ring was placed in his possession until his death. It was lately sent to Mr. Cimiotti, as a present. The ring is oval, about the size of a three cent piece, and is surrounded by twenty-five small rubies. In the centre, covered with glass, is the "Strawberry Tree," an emblematic figure, while underneath are the words, "God direct our [hearts]," the latter word being represented by two hearts united. The following description, which accompanies the relic, explains these symbols:

"Before the Declaration of Independence, (July 4th, 1776,) it had become customary in North America, among the patriots who aimed at a change of the state of things, to distinguish themselves by wearing certain marks or emblems indicative of their sentiments. One of those most in vogue, was the motto: 'God directs the hearts of the King,' bearing at the same time the "Strawberry tree" of Kerry, which grows out of a wolf, or before which cowers a wolf. This had reference to the heroic rising of the inhabitants of Kerry, (Kesmare,) against the despotism of the English, which reminded the ancient Irish of their ancestors, who originally emigrated from a barren soil into a fertile valley, and causing the highest prosperity. The history of Kerry (Kesmare) served in America, at the above time, by distinctly giving it to understand that it was a prose and verse, as well as in pictorials, to inspire the people. It appeared on rings and snuff-boxes, and there was possibly no house nor cabin, in which there was not some picture representing it, hanging against the wall. Everybody had probably his own "Kerry," (Kesmare) according to his circumstances, and wherever it was seen it denoted the sentiments of its possessor."

The ring has been well taken care of, but six of the rubies have been lost, and a small piece of the glass covering the little tree has been broken off. It is a curious relic, and would form an interesting feature in a cabinet of curiosities.

Sword Presentation.

The First Ward Rifles, Allegheny Home Guards, have for Captain Major Frederick Hambright, a military veteran of some "threes score and ten," but active and energetic as the youngest—of whom they are justly proud. Major H. was recently elected unanimously as Major of the Second Regiment of Rifles, Home Guards, and his company on Thursday presented to him a magnificent dress sword and sword belt, as a token of their regard for him as a gentleman and a soldier.

S. S. Bryan, Esq., President of the company, made the presentation speech, alluding in an eloquent manner to the high appreciation the Rifles entertained for their Captain.

Major Hambright replied:

SIR: I have reason to feel proud when I think of the honor conferred upon me, at my advanced age, when you called me to take command of the First Ward Home Guard Rifle Company. Since then, the voice of the officers and men of the 2d Regiment of Rifles has conferred a still higher grade, and honored me with the rank of Major.

The presentation of a sword to a military commander, of whatever rank he may be, is the highest honor which can be conferred.

Sir, this is a time when it would seem the duty of every citizen of the Northern and Western States to bear arms, and equally their duty to qualify themselves for the defence of their country. The flag of our Union has been trampled in the dust by the rebels of the so-called Confederate States; it therefore becomes our duty to rally around the stars and stripes—the flag of our country—the emblem of our liberty—may it float in the air of freedom to the end of time!

I receive this sword, sir, with feelings such as I cannot describe. Should my country call me to duty, I hereby pledge myself to use it in such a manner as shall not cause any of the company to regret having placed it in my hands. Please accept my thanks for this valued present, and convey them to those you represent. Your kind feelings towards me shall be cherished as long as I live.

Astounding Rascality—Forgery of $34,000

—The Villain Escapes.

One of the most audacious and extensive series of forgeries, says the Washington (Pa.,) Examiner, ever perpetrated in this region of country has just, within the past few days, been brought to public light. It exceeds in boldness and extent the wholesale transactions of M'Connell, a couple of months ago. The accomplished perpetrator of these villainies is named John W. Smith, and resided previous to his flight, near Patterson's mills, in the north-western portion of this county. The total amount of forgeries successively perpetrated already brought to light, sum up something near $34,000! The forgeries consists principally, if not entirely, of negotiable paper, upon which were the false endorsements of a number of the best known and most substantial men of Smith's own neighborhood. We are unable to obtain an entirely full account of the various operations of the masterly rascal; but so far as we have learned they are about as follows:

Notes disposed of to Dr. F. J. LeMoyne, of Washington, $14,000; to Wm. Smith & Son, $3000; to Franklin Bank of Washington, $1000; to Wheeling Banks, $5000; to Wellsburg Bank $2000.

Besides the foregoing, all of which are forgeries, Smith leaves other liabilities behind him amounting to some $8000 or $10,000. The scoundrel has, unfortunately for justice, made his escape to parts unknown. No trace to his whereabouts has yet been discovered. It is devoutly to be wished that he may be caught and returned, and penitentiary quarters for life afforded him.

Hubbub in New Brighton.

A day or two since news came to New Brighton that a boat was coming down the canal loaded with arms, which it was said were destined for Parkersburg, Va. The excitement among the loyal New Brightonians was immense. A large force was organized and marched up the canal to capture the aforesaid canal boat. It was soon captured, and at once the search proceeded to overhaul its contents, which consisted of the household effects of some man who was moving to Parkersburg. Beds, bureau, bales, band-boxes, were thoroughly examined, an unfortunate sewing machine was taken apart under suspicion that it was some sort of an infernal machine, and everything high and low underwent a thorough examination. The only "munitions of war" which were seized consisted of one percussion cap box without any caps in it. The invading army surrendered the boat to the charge of its captain and marched back again perfectly satisfied.
