LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, May 31, 1861.

The Department of State has been informed that the Government of Virginia has declared its independence of the United States and has proclaimed a new Government in Richmond. This act is a serious and alarming step, and it is the duty of the United States Government to respond to it in a manner that will preserve the Union and the Constitution.

The President has issued a proclamation in response to this act, declaring that he has received information that certain persons have been engaged in a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the United States. He has therefore ordered the arrest of these persons, and he has also ordered that all persons who are known to be engaged in such a conspiracy should be arrested and held for trial.

The Department of State has also been informed that the Government of Virginia has taken other steps that are calculated to weaken the Union. It has authorized the sale of public lands to foreign bidders, and it has also authorized the sale of public property to foreign bidders. These acts are a direct violation of the laws of the United States, and they are a serious and alarming step.
