PITTSBURGH:

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 7, 1861.

Contraband Negroes.

Dr. Livingston gives a glowing description of a region which he explored in the interior of South Africa, where cotton grows spontaneously and to great perfection. The inhabitants are greatly superior to those near the coast, whence slaves have been obtained for over two centuries. In the interior region of which we are speaking slavery is unknown. What an impulse would the introduction of some thousands of American negroes, speaking the English language, and familiar with the cultivation of the cotton plant, give to such a country as that, under the lead of intelligent white and colored men! It is the very country to suit them, and they are the very men that that country needs. A colony of colored people from America, with schools and churches, would soon rise to be the centre of Christian civilization in that quarter of the globe, and in a short time lead to important moral and commercial results. None of the objections that can be urged against Liberia apply to that region. It is healthy, salubrious, fertile, and the natives are of a higher order by far than those found contiguous to the Liberian colony.

Great Britain would unite heartily in the enterprise of transporting "cotton planters" from America to Southern Africa, and would construct railroads from the coast to their country.

Here is one way of disposing of our voluntary "captives taken in war," the number of whom promises to be enormous, and whose future prospects in this country are not very encouraging. Here, by an inexorable law of social life, they are an inferior caste, though nominally free. There they would be a sort of aristocracy. The ability to speak the English language, and still more to read and write it, would give them a position above that of the natives; and were they to go in large numbers, that language would in time supersede the native dialects, and bear into that pagan population all the blessings of science, and, what is better still, of the Christian religion.

Cassius M. Clay in England.

In an able and plain-spoken letter, addressed to the editor of the London Times, the Hon. C. M. CLAY has laid before the people of Great Britain a brief of the case which he holds as a representative of the U. S. Government, to show cause why the rebels of the Southern States should not receive aid and comfort, in any shape, from the Governments of Europe—and more especially not from the Government and people of Great Britain.

The first division of his letter sets forth—in answer to the question, "What are we fighting for?"—the treason and rebellion, the perfidy and outrage, the anarchy and barbarism, which underlie the euphuism of secession, and which all recognition of its principles must involve. These opening paragraphs of Mr. Clay's letter will have great effect, as they succinctly state the whole case in such a way as to touch many a chord in the popular heart, which is devoted to liberty, and also to excite the fears of that class who would have much reason to tremble at the progress of such disorganizing doctrines as Secession teaches.

The subsequent parts of the letter dispose of two other questions which have been made almost as prominent as the first one, by the wide discussion which they have recently received in the newspapers. They are, of course, the same we were so well accustomed to, not long ago, in certain quarters at home, namely, "Can you subdue the revolted States?" and, supposing that, "Can you govern a subjugated people, and reconstruct the Union?"

When Mr. Clay answers—"We do not propose to subjugate the revolted States—we propose simply to put down the rebel citizens," he puts the whole matter in a nutshell, and delivers English readers from the sophistry and misrepresentation which the hired agents of the conspirators had been industriously disseminating.

He then asks the British public some pertinent questions, and helps them a little toward answering the same:

1.—Were should British honor place her in this contest?

2.—What is the interest of England now?

3.—What England offered to offend the great nation which will be "The United States of America," even should we lose part of the South?

He affirms, in conclusion, that England is the natural ally of the United States, and asks: "Will she, then, ignore our aspirations"—to secure our national unity, the permanence of our constitutional fights, and the peaceful legitimate development of our free institutions?—"If she is just, she ought not. If she is honorable and magnanimous, she cannot. If she is wise, she will not."

Eleven Months.

The Chicago "Tribune" is responsible for the following:—

We are able to announce on unquestionable authority, that Gen. Scott has so far matured the plans for the war as to inform the President and Cabinet that the last secession flag shall be torn down, the authority of the Federal Government reinstated on every foot of American soil, and Jeff. Davis hung or driven out of the country, within eleven months from the day when Fort Sumter was surrendered. About the 4th of March next he will hand over the Union, safe and sound, to its constituted and constitutional authorities. Old Lundy Lane takes his time to map out the campaign and put his forces in the best fighting trim; and then he always wins at the time of day he agrees to. He has taken the contract to wind up the disunion business within eleven months from the 13th of April, and he will do it.

We understand that it is a part of General Scott's plan to occupy Virginia and Tennessee completely on or before the 20th of July. Sixty-five thousand Northwestern troops will move down the Mississippi as far as Memphis, under command of Generals Fremont and McClelland, and remain in camp until the sickly season is past, when they will move on toward the Belize, there meeting the conquering army of the East and celebrating Washington's birth day in New Orleans.

The Penumbra of Barbarism.

Surely Richmond, Virginia's Capital, is steadily progressing toward the thick darkness of her barbarous sisters—the cities of the Gulf Confederacy. Before the period of total eclipse, there is the penumbra of barbarism—and Richmond seems in that transitional condition.

S. W. Williams, a well-known lawyer of Washington, a native of Virginia, returned to Washington on Tuesday from a visit to Richmond, where he was incarcerated in jail, despite that he was among relatives and friends, none of whom were able to afford him any relief for several days. His narrative is interesting, and may be relied upon from his high standing. We quote from the "World":

Mr. Williams went from Washington on personal business, and to see his friends. He registered his name and residence at his hotel. His was almost immediately arrested by a detachment of Virginia soldiers, led by a well known gambler, formerly resident in Washington. He was immediately taken to jail and placed in a cell where desperate criminals are usually confined, and which was so arranged that it was impossible for him to sit down. His valise was seized, as well as everything on his person.

He demanded to know on what charge he had been arrested, and was informed that he was recognized as a Union man. He remained all night in this cell, which was of the most filthy character. In the morning he was placed in another cell, but closely confined. No communication was permitted with friends, or with the authorities.

At the end of three days he was brought out of jail and conveyed before the Mayor's Court. Here some friends desired to procure counsel, but he declined, preferring to plead his own case. The only evidence produced was that he was a Union man and a resident of Washington; and it was urged that his presence at Richmond was objectionable unless his business could be satisfactorily explained. Mr. Williams entered into the details of his business, and showed clearly that he was not there on a hostile errand.

The Mayor presented a note found on his person from John Minor Botts, stating simply that having heard from his daughter that Williams was in the city, he desired a visit from him at his farm in the country. This was held to prove treason from the fact that Botts mentioned that he must see Williams before he returned home.

The prisoner explained that he had known Mr. Botts many years, and simply desired to make him a friendly visit. There was much parleying, but after a while a justice desired Williams to go on with the defense. His friends begged him not to speak, but he proceeded and reviewed his course from the time of leaving Washington, until his arrest, and concluded with an emphatic declaration of his sentiments on the rebellion. He is a fine speaker, and was listened to with attention. He denounced the rebels unmercifully. Spoke of the treatment which he, a native born Virginian, had received at the hands of those who were once his fellow-citizens, and concluded by declaring that he was not a secessionist, and never had been, and no power on earth could ever make him one. He intended to remain loyal to the old Government in spirit and action as long as the semblance of it remained on earth. He sat down weak and exhausted, expecting every moment to be shot or to be sent back to jail. His friends among the secessionists begged that he might be released and furnished with a pass, and allowed to go out of the State. After much deliberation he was released, and was allowed to see his relatives, and to visit John Minor Botts.

He found the latter engaged quietly in agricultural pursuits, but worn out and broken down with grief at the dreadful state of affairs around him. He found him still true at heart to the old flag; though his safety required that he should say nothing to that effect. When he visited Richmond he was subject to all kinds of insults, and therefore rarely left his rural retreat.

Old School General Assembly.

EDS. GAZETTE:—I send you the paper adopted by the late General Assembly, with respect to the national crisis, and also a correct list of the yeas and nays.

Gratefully acknowledging the distinguished bounty and care of Almighty God toward this favored land, and also recognizing our obligations to submit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, this General Assembly adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in view of the present agitated and unhappy condition of this country, the first day of July next be hereby set apart as a day of prayer throughout our bounds, and that on the day, ministers and people are called on humbly to confess and bewail our national sins; to offer our thanks to the Father of Lights for his abundant and undeserved goodness toward us a nation; to seek his guidance and blessings upon our rulers and their counsels, as on well as the Congress of the United States about to assemble; and to implore him, in the name of Jesus Christ, the Great High Priest of the Christian profession, to turn away his anger from us, and speedily restore us the blessings of an honorable peace.

Resolved, That this General Assembly, in the spirit of that Christian patriotism which the Scriptures enjoin, and which has always characterized our Church, do hereby acknowledge and declare our obligation to promote and perpetuate, so far as in us lies, the integrity of these United States, and to strengthen, uphold and encourage the Federal Government in the exercise of all its functions under our noble Constitution, and to this Constitution in all its provisions, requirements, and principles, we profess our unabated loyalty. And to avoid all misconception, the Assembly declare that by the terms "Federal Government," as here used, is not meant any particular administration, or the peculiar opinions of any political party, but that central administration which being at any time appointed and inaugurated according to the forms prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, is the visible representative of our national existence.

In an editorial published a day or two ago, you mentioned that the exception to the Records of the Synod of South Carolina concerning the action of 1818, as the subject of slavery would elicit a warm discussion. In this you were mistaken. But two speakers opposed the exception taken by the Committee, and but three votes were given against it. Thus the Assembly, with only three dissenting votes, declared that the action of 1818 had not been repealed, and that the Synod of South Carolina was wrong in saying it had been. Several southern men spoke warmly and decidely in favor of the Church adhering to the doctrine of 1818. Thus this old Church is true to her ancient declaration on the subject of slavery. QUNQUE.

Election of General Officers—A Word of Remonstration to Our Republican Friends.

Eds. Gazette: We all feel and know that, however well established and united is the popular sentiment and resolution to preserve and uphold the Constitution and Laws of the United States in Pennsylvania, and north of Mason and Dixon's line, that once accomplished, political parties as they existed heretofore, under new names, will again put on their harness for political power and ascendancy. The Republican party is now overwhelming in numbers and in the affections of the people. But no one is so blind as not to see that our late opponents are awake and alive to the future; that no effort is spared to recommend and press their prominent men into the service of the Government in its military, civil and diplomatic positions. Let us not sleep on our arms, but watch with vigilance every movement that tends to cast our political power into the hands of our late opponents, which may be as readily done by our supineness in military as in civil offices. An election for several general officers in what is termed the Home Guards is to be held on Saturday next, for which prominent Democratic names have been placed before the people. If we have not in the Republican family such men as are worthy of these distinctions, why then for one I am willing to concede them to Democratic gentlemen. But such is not the fact, we have full as good and efficient honorable men of the Republican party in this Banner county on whom to bestow these honors, and I insist that no such violation of what is right and proper to accord to members of the Republican party be countenanced, at the bestowal of high military honors on a party which has, to some extent, been instrumental in producing the present difficulties in which the country is involved, however faithful they may be in sustaining the Constitution NOW. What I wish to guard is the future political ascendancy of the Republican party. Concessions of military distinction to prominent members of the Democratic party by popular election, will soon be heralded forth as symptoms of decline of Republicanism, if not as a Democratic triumph in this leading republican county. On this subject I would recommend the publication of an article in the N. Y. Tribune, of Tuesday, in our Republican papers, which assumes the right and gives some needful cautionary advice for the future guidance of the Republican party everywhere. X.

$,000,000 PENNSYLVANIA STATE LOAN.

THE SUBSCRIBERS HAVING BEEN authorized by the Governor and State Treasurer to procure bids for the Loan recently authorized by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, to support the Government, the patriotism and State pride of Pennsylvanians in this hour of trial that they come forward and manifest their love of the Old Commonwealth by a prompt and liberal response to her call.

Independent of any motives of patriotism, there are considerations of self-interest which may be considered in reference to the Loan. It is a Six per cent. Loan, free from any taxation, and holders can at all times obtain privilege of taking Certificates of $50, or $100, $500 or $1000, or larger sums, and either coupon or transferable loan. A Sinking Fund is to absorb Three Hundred Thousand Dollars per annum, is by this Loan Bill levied, and is to be applied, by payment of the interest on the Loan, and to the purposes of a liberal Sinking Fund. The Bill most stringently guards against any but an economical and judicious expenditure of the money, and throws around the disbursement, as will be seen by the annexed card of the State Treasurer, the most satisfactory checks and guards. The money will be ready for disbursement as soon as the Loan is taken. It is confidently expected that most of the funds now deposited temporarily in said to the General Government, will be in due time returned to our Treasury.
