Important Expedition.

About a week ago the government chartered fourteen light draught steamboats at this city—which, for obvious reasons, the press and telegraph here said nothing about, and at the same time upwards of twenty other boats were obtained at Cincinnati and other ports below. Their destination and purpose were kept profoundly secret, nor do we yet know any thing more than we did at first. But as the fact of the employment of these boats is published in the New York papers, we are now free to speak on the subject, and give the conjectures of the best informed men as to the use that is to be made of them.

About two weeks ago the readers of the Gazette will remember that we called attention to the importance of an expedition into the "Mountain Region" of Western Virginia, which extends from the Monongahela and Ohio rivers, entirely through Virginia in a south-west direction, into Eastern Tennessee and thence to Northern Alabama. It is through that region that the great railroad which connects Eastern Virginia, at Lynchburg, with the South-Western States passes. It crosses the line dividing Virginia from Tennessee a short distance south-west of Abingdon, in Washington county, in a valley drained by the extreme head branches of the Tennessee river, more than 200 miles south-west from Lynchburg. This great thoroughfare crosses the valley of the Kenawha near its head waters, and throughout its whole course traverses as fine a region as can be found in the Southern States.

To reach and cut off this important highway, the shortest route from the Ohio is to follow the valley of the Kenawha the entire distance. Steamboats can ascend that river as far as Charleston, in Kenawha county, about fifty miles up. Thence to Lewisburg, near the Blue Sulphur Spring, and some ten or twelve miles distance from the celebrated White Sulphur Springs, is not much, if any, over 100 miles—no railroad. At the White Sulphur Springs there is a railroad leading across the mountains to Charlottesville, east of the Blue Ridge. From Lewisburg to the point where the Virginia and Tennessee railroad crosse the Kenawha, the distance is about 50 miles. The possession of these two railroads—one leading from the White Sulphur Springs to Charlottesville, and the other leading from Tennessee and all the South-western States to Lynchburg, would render our forces masters of the situation, cut off supplies and reinforcements from Eastern Virginia, and enable them to take the rebels in the rear, thus thoroughly outflanking them and cutting off their retreat.

It is on all hands believed that the steamboats recently chartered are intended to carry troops up the Kenawha as far as they can go, there leaving them in the heart of Western Virginia, to push their way south or southeast, or both. Once in possession of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, the Federal troops can move in both directions, and crush rebellion in both those States.

There are two very important advantages in this field of operations—the climate is very healthy, and the majority of the people are loyal to the Government. It is a remarkable physiological fact, that the world over, the principles of Freedom are found among the people of mountainous regions, while despotism and Slavery have ever had their strong holds on extensive and fertile plains. In all parts of the world, among civilized and barbarous people, in ancient and modern times, the phenomenon has been unvarying; and here in the South we see it once more strikingly exemplified.

The True Voice of English Feeling.

This is not to be found in the Times, or in any journal that merely represents a class, however powerful that class may be. The true voice of English feeling is rather to be sought for in the new popular penny (two-cent) daily, or the long popular weekly newspaper, than in the Times and similar eight or ten-cent daily journals, that always strive at least, to give such a direction to public opinion as they deem most likely to subserve the interests, or flatter the prejudices, of the class they represent. Public opinion, however, as soon as it shall be more fully formed, will ultimately sweep into its great current every galmaying editor, correspondent, penny-a-liner, and all other spurtsmanses whatsoever belonging to the Fourth Estate—and the Times' people will take good care not to be last.

As a specimen of how the better class of journals are, and have long been, speaking of us, we give the following extract from the editorial in the month's News of the Churches which is published in Edinburg:

"The vigor of the Northern States of America has for the time prevented the threatened advance of the South; but bloodshed is imminent. The sympathy of the Christian public of this country must, we think, be emphatically with the North. It is to be regretted that a portion of the Free and many of our public men, losing sight of the noble struggle and sacrifices of the past in opposition to the system of slavery, are inclined to hope for the establishment of an independent Southern Republic. Such a Republic might immensely extend the system, by seizing Mexico and many of the West India Islands, and might perpetuate it, in its worst form, for ages to come. We would earnestly pray that God would be pleased to use the present crisis for the utter abolition and overthrow of a system which brutalises both masters and slaves, and destroys all that sense of human brotherhood which is at the very essence of the Christian faith to preserve and increase."

[Extra!]

BY A BLUNDER, the rebels failed to destroy some fifty locomotives belonging to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. The locomotives were at Martinsburg. Gen. Johnston sent a force to Martinsburg to bring down the engines and destroy the bridges. Tool captain, in his zeal, thought he would make a sure thing of it by burning the bridge as he went up, for which reason he surprised to find on his return, that he had cut off his retreat.

PATRIOTISM OF WESTERN VIRGINIANS.—The people of Western Virginia are represented to be confident and full of courage. Ten thousand men are ready to take arms in support of the Government, and only ask to be placed in the van. There is an especial itching at their fingers' ends for the manipulation of Brigadier General Wise. He would find a short shrift and a sure cord.

FIDELITY OF SAILORS AND SOLDIERS.—It is a gratifying fact that, while both army and navy officers have resigned and entered the rebel service by scores, not a single sailor or soldier has deserted. Whatever motive may have actuated politicians, the people have not forgotten the meaning of loyalty and patriotism.

FROM MEXICO.—We have late advices from Mexico. The Government is staple and growing in the confidence of the people. The old Cabinet has resigned, and a new one has been selected by the President from the members of Congress. There is a strong and cordial feeling toward the United States Government, in spite of the most absurd rumors which have reached them as to our condition. It was reported there that President Lincoln had been driven out of Washington, and that Gen. Scott had resigned and taken command of the Southern Army.

THE MARYLAND LEGISLATURE AND OUTRAGE.—A terrible outcry was set up by the agitators in that body of ignoramuses, known as the Maryland Legislature, because the Federal troops, within the borders of that State, in one or two cases, have laid violent hands upon a few obstinate and straw-headed, but not one word of complaint is uttered at the wicked and cowardly destruction by the rebels of the property of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and at Harper's Ferry.

The New Orleans Zouaves in Montgomery.

A correspondent—(what a ubiquitous creature that is)—of the New York Tribune has managed to get the following written and sent from Montgomery, Alabama, bearing date the 5th inst:

"The Chief one of the 'counterfeit States' has at last resolved not to attack Fort Pickens, and to transfer a part of the besieging troops to Virginia. About three thousand of them passed the city a few days since, looking wretchedly and being greatly dissatisfied. The New Orleans Zouaves arrived here Sunday morning. When they left for Pensacola all the southern papers were full of praise of this gallant corps, most of whom are French-men, and many of whom have seen service in Algiers. The Zouaves did not conceal at all their dissatisfaction; they said that they did not receive any pay during the time of their service, that they were nearly starved, and expressed their determination not to leave this city before they received their pay and a promise of better treatment. They said that the South was incapable of carrying on this war for want of good officers, for most of those in service were utterly ignorant of military affairs. You may imagine the feeling of our fire-eaters.

"Our city, generally so quiet on Sunday, was very lively that day. The streets were filled with soldiers, who discussed freely the state of affairs, some of them jolly and singing others uttering their dissatisfaction and threatening to help themselves, if necessary, and some entering the churches and disturbing the service, thinking, apparently, that they were past praying for. In the afternoon the Central Bank was opened, and $3,000 distributed among the men to quiet them, but the largess had little good effect. Some visited houses of prostitution, and committed the most horrible outrages; others continued raving the city, hallooing, singing and threatening, to the great alarm of citizens, until other soldiers in camp were ordered to subdue the tumult. They were busy all the evening and night. Five of the Zouaves were killed, and more than one hundred were dispersed in the woods, most of whom were afterward caught, and sent to Virginia by the express train.

The newspapers were ordered not to make these disgraceful proceedings public, and of course they obeyed instructions.

A Rebel General as a Slave Owner.

The Washington Correspondent of the Evening "Post" gives the following picture of the conduct of Col. Lee, now General in the Confederate Army, and who is the proprietor of the place generally known as the Arlington Heights. He married Miss Custis, and thus acquired the estate.

General McLowell has a beautiful spot for his headquarters, the well known Arlington House, and General Lee's old servants seem to delight in caring for the new occupants of the place. Lee was a hard master, as many a kind-hearted housewife in Washington, who has given his slaves something to eat on Sundays knows. He took with him all the smart slaves, and left behind the old and infirm and the very young. Yet every one of these slaves is legally entitled to his freedom. Mr. Custis, in his will, gave them all their freedom. But gave to Lee, his son-in-law, certain temporary power over them. This he has used very roughly, utterly refusing to show the will to any of the friends of the slaves, who were anxious to see that their rights under Virginia law were secured to them. There is a toothless old woman on the place, who for ten years has been obliged to rise at daylight and knit till dark—it is all she can do—to secure herself a few of the comforts necessary to old age. Lee has been in the habit of giving her weekly a peck of unground corn and two salt herring. These facts were known to me before the present troubles began. A slave girl of sixteen attempted to run away from the plantation a year since, and was caught. General Lee ordered her to be stripped to the waist and whipped, and this was done in the presence of her mother. After the whipping, the girl was taken to Richmond, and then forwarded to some cotton plantation. It is not strange that the slaves left behind gladly welcome the change.

England and the Rebels.

A Memphis paper recently said that the course heretofore pursued by Great Britain was worth to the Southern Confederacy as much as twenty victories. How many victories to the North will the news we publish to-day be worth in the eyes of that wise journal? Mr. Gregory's motion in the House of Commons for the speedy recognition of the Rebel Government has been postponed sine die. This ends the question during the present session of Parliament at least, and, before another session is held, the rebellion will have been so nearly subdued, that the rebels will not be able to recognize their own Government, much less to ask others to recognize it.

So all the staff of the London "Times," and the flattering letters of its correspondent, W. H. Russell, LL. D., go for naught. England's Government is where England's people are, and always will be—on the side of freedom, truth and justice. Mr. Russell, who has got out of the land of rebellion into the land of freedom, once more, has been heard from at Cairo; and the only thing he tells about the Southern people, among whom he has sojourned, is that they have tampered with his letters, opened them, altered some and stopped others. This is his experience as a petted guest among those who pretend to have established the finest Government on earth. He can now, however, write as he pleases, and the Federal Postmasters will not interfere with his letters. Even if he should misrepresent affairs here, he will not be able to change the decision of the English people, which is totally adverse to the recognition of the "so-called Confederate States."—[Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Contracting of the Great Serpent.

It was an ominous expression of Gen. Scott —"We must draw the mighty boa constrictor around the traitors." What he thus said, he meant, and he is carrying his intention out, slowly, but surely. The folds of the great serpent are contracting about the rebel forces. It has driven them from Harper's Ferry, and is winding itself around Manassas Junction, where signs of retreat are already visible, from the tactics of the great Federal leader. The United States forces are moving with steady progress in the direction of Richmond and the South. Their movements are not those of haste, but of power—movements that are and will be forward always, and such as rebellion will be powerless to resist. Our soldiers are fast becoming veterans in drill and efficiency, while the spirit which animates them is of the most chivalrous and courageous nature. The days of their inactivity will make them so in fact. Behind them is, and until the war shall cease, will be, an army of reserve which will more than supply the place of those who may fall in battle, or be disabled by injuries or sickness. A force of 150,000 men will be in the field, with heavier and better armaments than the enemy, and with the spirit that inspires them, they will march steadily onward to the final overthrow of the boasted chivalry of the traitors.—[N. Y. Times.

THE CHINESE IMPERIAL ALMANIC.—The Moniteur del' Armee publishes a letter from Shanghai to the 22d of March, which furnishes the following details. "The Imperial Almanic of China for 1861 appeared as usual at Pekin in the beginning of the present month. It consists of twelve thick volumes, and, in addition to the names of all the officials of the Chinese government, gives a summary of the events which have taken place during the past year. For the first time foreigners are spoken of in respectful terms, and the text of different treaties concluded with them given. Military events are not passed over in silence, but are explained in a very whimsical manner. It is stated that the foreign ambassadors, being accompanied by a numerous guard of honor, misunderstandings had arisen between the soldiers of that escort and those of the Chinese army, but that all difficulties had been arranged by the devotedness of the chiefs of the government."

DEATH OF MRS. AGNES BAILLIE.—The announcement of a recent death has caused some emotion in society. Mrs. Agnes Baillie, the sister of Joanna and Dr. Baillie, is dead at the age of one hundred years. A quarter of a century since, Joanna and Agnes had settled their affairs precisely alike, and arranged every thing, each for the other, wondering how the survivor could live alone. They lived on together till long past eighty; yet Agnes has been the solitary survivor of her family for so many years that it was a relief—though still a reluctant one—to hear that she was gone.—[Once a Week.

DITHRIDGE'S IMPROVED OVAL

CARBON OIL

LAMP CHIMNEYS,

THE BEST THAT HAVE EVER YET been offered to the public. They are the best for the following reasons:

1. Because, being of an oval shape, the glass is everywhere equally distant from the flame, so that the draft is stronger and more regular.

2. The oval shape is better adapted to resist the effect of sudden expansion, so that it is impossible to crack them.

3. The glass is made largely of Lead and Pearlash, giving a great degree of strength and elasticity. The chimneys which housekeepers have found to be so brittle as to crack even when not in use, are invariably made of Lime Glass instead of the Flint Glass, of which ours are manufactured.

4. But the greatest advantage of these Chimneys is that when you have one it will last forever, and if any housekeeper breaks one by the heat of the lamp, let her call at the Manufactory, Washington street, near Pennsylvania Avenue, and we will replace her cracked chimney by a dozen whole ones. This proffer does not include accidents or those cases of breakage where the chimney has, through inexperience, been screwed up closely to the lamp as to prevent its expansion when heated.

Those who have hitherto denied themselves the luxury of the Carbon Oil Light on account of the great expense of Chimneys, should know that there is no longer a necessity for them to endure the dim, sepulchral light of the antiquated tallow candle, as DITHRIDGE'S IMPROVED CHIMNEY has appeared—a Chimney that is made to last, and not merely to be sold.

☞ Remember, the place is at the FORT PITT GLASS WORKS, WASHINGTON STREET, near Pennsylvania Avenue. 1414:2awdnwtf N. D. DITHRIDGE.
