THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 4.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT NEWS.

WASHINGTON, July 1, 1861.

Forward Movement at Hand.

Preparations for the great movement which is expected soon to take place in Virginia, are steadily progressing at Washington. Troops continue to arrive by thousands, and the grand army across the Potomac is swelled proportionably. The great desideratum now appears to be means of transportation adequate to the wants of the greatest body of men which has been collected on this Continent, and this want is being rapidly supplied. By the time Congress is ready to legislate for the army, the army will be ready to move for the nation.

No doubt need be entertained that the suppression of the rebellion will be prosecuted vigorously and without halting. The administration does not intend to lag behind the almost universal demand of the people of the loyal States to move with celerity and certainty. Every day brings us nearer to the grand movement indicated in the despatches of last night. It may be begun at any time that the other division of the Union army is ready. The preparations here are ample, and all that is awaited is the signal of readiness to co-operate elsewhere. To-day an order was given to supply the whole force on both sides of the Potomac with "extra rations for six days, in addition to their regular supplies." This indicates an expectation for a sudden movement of greater magnitude than the simple advance of outposts. Three regiments have already been supplied with these extra rations, and will probably be thrown forward in advance of the movement.

From Richmond.

Last night two gentlemen, British subjects, arrived in this city from Richmond, via Norfolk and Fortress Monroe, their nationality having secured their transit and immunity from violence. One of them, a Mr. Hobey, was chaplain of the City Battalion during the "dark week." If the rebels had known this he would not have escaped so easily. The other, Mr. James, is a gray-haired merchant, and resident in Richmond—a man whose word is beyond dispute. From the latter, though his lips are sealed to the number of armed rebels in Virginia, I gather many general items of insignificance. He says that there are unquestionably two parties in the State, the radical Secessionists exercising a kind of terrorism over the lukewarm. Governor Letcher and the civilians immediately in his confidence are suspected of being secretly opposed to the rebellion. There is consequently a sharp, continuous conflict between the civil and military authorities. Governor Letcher's passes are no longer "safe conducts." A lettres de cachet system is in force. No Legislature, or other person maintaining freedom of speech and love of liberty, can safely remain in Richmond. Mr. James left because he was constantly in danger of assassination. The British consul is half frightened, and half in the rebel interest, and glosses over the outrages offered to his fellow-subjects of the crown.

In the meantime, the entire effectiveness of the blockade, resulting in great distress at Richmond, has caused loud murmurs and dissatisfaction among the populace. Provisions are scarce—coffee and salt especially so, and very high. Drugs are anything but a drug; not half enough for army purposes can be obtained; the Southern stock of alum and acids is quite exhausted. The only article of consumption which can be obtained in quantities is a miserable kind of liquor, known as "Stumpdown" or "Dick'ry" whisky. The troops in the North of Richmond, under Generals Magruder, Johnson & Co., are suffering the severest hardships and privation.

Arrest for Tampering with Soldiers.

John Rives was arrested by a squad of the 26th Pennsylvania Regiment, yesterday, on a charge of tampering with the soldiers, and inducing them to desert. A private testified that he went to Rives' house and asked him to make a knapsack-box. Rives asked how he was fixed, and he said that he did not get enough to eat. Rives then asked witness why he did not leave. He then went on to show the advantages of joining the Southern army, and if he would leave and go down there he would soon make his fortune, and might marry a rich planter's daughter. Witness told him he had no clothes to disguise himself, and Rives gave him a dollar with which to buy clothes. Ellenger's statement was also corroborated by a companion, and Rives was committed for a further examination. A number of other spies have been arrested within the last twenty-four hours.

Gen. Banks and his Movements.

The movements of Gen. Banks have created no surprise in well-informed circles here. Ten days ago he wrote to the War Department that it would soon be imperatively necessary for Secretary martial law in Baltimore, unless in some other way the acts of Marshal Kane could be stopped. He advised his arrest and the appointment of a Provost Marshal. This step seemed so grave a one that the Secretary did not feel at liberty to authorize it without a Cabinet consultation. A Cabinet meeting was held, and it was decided that unless some decidedly overt act was committed by Kane, it would be ill-advised policy to arouse the spirit of opposition in Baltimore. Of this decision General Banks was notified, and until now he has been quietly watching.

There can be no doubt that General Banks has stopped one of the most gigantic and treasonable plots of the day. It is not permitted us to give details yet, though doubtless the official report will be published at the proper time. Suffice it to say, that had the arrest of Kane been delayed twenty-four hours, there would not at the writing be a continuous line of railway communication between Philadelphia and Washington, and there would not be as many loyal States in the Union as there are at this time. Scores of Baltimoreans are here to-night, full of blood and thunder, and vowing amongst themselves vengeance on Banks. He can stand it, if they can.

It is gratifying to see and hear the loyal men of Baltimore, who are here from that city. They are in fuel secure. They thank the Government for stationing Banks there, and hope he will remain in the good work he has so well begun. Their property, lives and opinions are now their own.

The Chesapeake Blockade Neglected.

The brig Moro, lately arrived here with a cargo of ice from New York, brings curious news as to the effectiveness of the blockade of the Chesapeake. She passed the Capes in open daylight; saw the fleet lying off Old Point, and continued up the Bay without displaying her colors; no ship that had arrived off Acquia Creek did any vessel of the blockading squadron take any notice of her. At that place the Pawnee brought her to and sent a boat aboard. The officer in command, expressing astonishment that the brig's papers were not indorsed, reported to his superior, who also boarded the brig. As there was no reason to suspect the captain of illegal intention, he was sent on his way, and the Pawnee's boat back an acceptable load of ice. But suppose this craft had been engaged in carrying arms or munitions of war, she could have taken them up the York or Rappahannock rivers, and no one would have been the wiser. In what sense is this an effective blockade?

A Treasury Clerk Praying for Rebels.

Among the clerks who infest the Treasury Department is one formerly a Methodist local preacher, born in Alabama and appointed from Virginia, who is retained, although he refused to take the oath of allegiance. He was present a few days since at a Union prayer meeting, over which the President of Columbia College presided. Partly to test the President's loyalty, a request was sent up that prayers might be offered for the Union men who have been driven out of Harper's Ferry. The chairman, who was accused the other day of allowing signal-lights to the Rebels to be burned on the top of the College—a charge not proven—intimated that it might not be inappropriate to pray also for suffering Disunionists. Gladly arose our Arcadian clerk, and earnestly offered prayer for both loyal and disloyal alike—following the prayer with a speech, in which he thanked God that his God was not a sectional God. Young Hamlin, of New York; a nephew of the Vice President, who has recently received an appointment in the army, rejoined in a speech which showed the disloyal clerk the difference between a section maintaining the Government and a section defying it and trampling upon liberty and order alike.

Congressional Officers.

The contest for the Speakership and the other officers of the House is not to be a protracted struggle. Whatever of contest there is, will terminate on the night of the 3d; for I think the first (direct,) securely packed, on receipts of price and postage, $1 15. Apply to our address:

The subscribers take pleasure in announcing to the Citizens of Pittsburgh that they have obtained the Agency for, and are now enabled to offer to the American public, the above justly celebrated and world renowned article.

THE STIMULATING ONGUENT is prepared by Dr. C. F. Bellingham, an eminent physician of London, and is warranted to bring out a thick set of WHISKERS OR A MUSTACHE
in from three to six weeks. This article is the only one of the kind used by the French, and in London and Paris it is in universal use.
It is a beautiful, economical, soothing, yet stimulating compound, acting as if by magic upon the roots, causing a beautiful growth of luxuriant hair. It is applied to the roots, it will cure falling hair, and cause to spring up in place of the bald spots a fine growth of new hair. Applied according to directions, it will turn red or very light hair dark, and restore grey hair to its original color, leaving it soft, smooth and flexible. The "ONGUENT" is an indispensable article in every gentleman's toilet, and after one week's use they would not for any consideration be without it.
The subscribers are the only Agents for the article in the United States, to whom all orders must be addressed.
