A Southern Estimate of Northern Men. A few years ago a Pennsylvanian in Kentucky fell in with an old gentleman who was at fire ground failroad. Finding that the Pennsylvanian was not inclined to condole with him very much in his affliction, he raised his arm, and exclaimed with great energy : "We have but one remedy! We have but one remedy!" "What's that romedy ?" the other asked. We must arm, our young men, and march them across that river, and compel them to do us "Is that all the remedy you have got !" ."It is all that is left." Those were the men who brought the present troubles upon the country. There is no place on earth where cowards are more cordially despited than in the Southern States; yet, judging by the running there has been of late in Virginia, they too have their share of that despited class.

He will be froquently heard from in this campaign.

It is an interesting fact in connection with his history that he was carnestly solicited to take the command of a German brigade to the results and the could be more useful there than elsewhere. He preferred to the problem of the FDERIA AND HIPPER AND HIP loyal Germans of St. Louis rather than leave them, assured that they were the men to give excellent accounts of themselves. His judg-ment is confirmed by the admirable steadiness of his soldiers in the recent affair at Carthage.
