of treason as Pennsylvania.

Garnet was a traitor. He descried the service of the government which gave him an education, and advanced him to high rank in its server first him to be served fai hfully for nineteen years;—but the wretched hercey, so prevalent among Sauthern men, that he owed a higher fealty to his native state than to his suprems government, led him into the rounous orusade in which he lost his life. He richly merited his fate; yet thousands of his loyal countrymen will sigh at the news of his fall, and call to mind the words of Israel's King—"Died Abner as a fool dieth?" The tender respects shown to his remains, and their return to his family in Riohmond, was a worthy finals of this great triumph.

this great triumph. Now Gen. McCiellan is ready to co operate with Gen. Patterson in the Central valley, which will probably be carried without any fighting, and thence both will cross the Blue Ridge Then we may look for a simultaneous movement by the four great lines under Major Generals McClellan, Patterson, McDowell and Butler, mond, which is probable, the Union forces can shut them in, and cut off their supplies, and thus compel a surrender; or they may reduce them by a series of assaults. As Gen. Soutt is not a precipitate soldier, and as he is very careful of the lives of his men, we are persuaded that he will prefer to shut them up and reduce the word of the lives of his men, we are persuaded that he will prefer to shut them up and reduce North two to one, three to one; rive to one; but experience has shown that exactly the reverse is the fact. Somebody remarked, recently, that although one Northern man could fight, five Southerners, yet it does require five Northern men to catch one of them. Whatever may be said of their fighting, certain it is they run well. The shall right was the men of the South were men to cure we want to men of the South were good soldiers; but they were columiters, and were fighting for their country, or at least in its service; but it is now clear that many of the unfortunate men who are arrayed under the banner of secession are not columiters. They are there by constraint. They had to enlist or there by constraint. They had to enlist or the country are the country and the columiters. They are there by constraint. They had to enlist or the country are the country and the columiters. They are there by constraint. They had to enlist or the country and the country shoulders; the country should be country shoulders; the country should be country shoulders.

Pardon no, brave volunteers of Pennsylvanis, good men and true as ye are, that we began with you in our thoughts, and, by some perverse association of ideas, as the learned call such things, we believe, found ourselves incontinently talking about such people as Piora McFlimseys and Jack Falstaff's ragged recruits. The fact is, we met with the following sentences in a letter about the enquiries of the lately appointed ter about the enquiries of the lately appointed Army Sanitary Commission, and we wanted to Kentucky and the Rebellion. A corresponde lent, writing from Louisville the Cincinnati "Gazette," says: This city is the scene of continual bustle, though there is little business. There is a continual passing and counterpassing of gentlemen from below, and ominous teta-a-tetes of treason, which were treasured to the continuation of the continuatio which meet one's observation at every corner who will be enabled to enclose the entire secession force in Eastern Virginia. Should they retreat to their fortifications around Richmond, which is probable, the Union forces can show them in and cut off their faminishes are cut of their faminishes and cut off their faminishes and cut off their faminishes and cut off their faminishes are cut of their faminishes and cut off their faminishes are cut of their faminishes are that he will prefer to shut them up and reduce them by starvation, to the more summary process of a battle or seige. It is true that in the extremity to which they will soon be reduced. Davis and Beauregard may feel bound to risk a general battle, and if they offer it Gen. Scott cannot would assemble to the reduced be reduced. The bold Union men of East Tennessee have written that upon the wall which terrifice the a general battle, and if they offer it Gen. Scott cannot svoid accepting it; but after what we have seen the past few days of the prowess of the "chivalry," there can be but little dust as to the results. If Garnet was unable to make to the result. If Garcet was unable to make the poor wretches he had under him stand before two or three regiments, what chance have they to grapple with the concentrated and disciplined hosts of the North, flushed with victory, and eager for the fray. But, battle or no battle, the overthrow of rebellion seems to be near at hand.

There is something very strange in the fact that the Southern troops cannot or will not fight. Before the war began, the Southern moving of soldiers from Camp Cheatham, to be transported to East Tennessee by the Chattanooga Raifroad. With these, I suppose, he hopes to subjugate the brave mountaineers.

When they begin it, God have mercy on their vonla! The East Tennessee are not of that style. Before they will submit to the usurpation, they will fill up their mountain gorges with carnasses and send their rippling streams to the Cumberland crimson with Secession blood.

By the way, how delightful would the effect that the Southern troops cannot or will not fight. Before the war began, the Southern fight. Before the war began, the Southern orators and presses confidently predicted that their men were able to conquer the men of the witcories, and send the rebels in both Eastern and Western Virginis, howling toward Rich.

at Phillipps how he accounted for the extreme place at Cambridge on Saturday, and was the at Phillipps how he accounted for the extreme cowardice of the secession treops. "Why, what have they to fight for?" was his emphatic reply.

—Since writing the foregoing, we have news of Gen. Patterson's advance towards Winchester, in the Central or Shenandeah valley. We were correct in our anticipations. The grand campaign will soon be intensely interesting.

When we hear these words used by a Miss Flora McFlimsey, or in her sense, we are quite unsaffected—at least our emotion, whatever it is, is not much akin to pity or sny kind of kindness; but was the following inscription, cut in old Snglish characters: "Frances Elizabeth Longfellow, born 6th October, 1817. die about the house commenced shortly after 12 o'clock, at the house commenced shortly after 12 o'cl

The Biockade.

Something will be done in Congress immeniately in reference to the evident inefficiency of our blockade of the southern ports: The point we meant, we shall not risk another four pas, by going further. Here is the extract from the latter referred to:

"A better supply of clothing is urged for the regiments not provided with good washing arrangements, and indeed for all. As one of the agents pointedly observes: 'There seems to be little use in talking of personal cleanlines to men who have been obliged to wear the same clothales, even to the shirt, for two moaths.' This reminds me of the remark of one of the Pennsylvania volunteere, who, when ordered to 'dress' ap,' significantly saked how that was possible for a man who had no seat in his pantalons, and hadn't seen a clean shirt for four weeks?"

It was our purpose, as we said above, not to add a word after giving the above paragraph, but leave it with the reader to append his own asters. Having read it over again, however, and most.' Having read it over again, however, and most.'—not by the button-hole—with Governor Cartin.
