PROGRESS OF PROTESTANTISM IN ITALY.—The Italian correspondent of the Providence (R. I.) Journal writes:

"The Protestant missionaries, both native and foreign, who are opening chapels and scattering Bibles in the larger towns in the north part of Italy, are doing a good work. They are dispelling superstitions and drawing men to a more liberal and religious faith. There are journals, speakers in public and private circles, and even advocates in courts of law, who criticise with severity Pope, priest and the corruptions of all sorts of the church and court of Rome. But the most efficient instrument which for more than a year past has been used to dissipate priestly illusions, and scourge the hoary errors of the Roman Catholic Church, are the publications of the Punch class, which are scattered throughout the cities and towns. One coming for the first time into this country would find it hard to be persuaded that Protestantism had not really got the upper hand. There is evidence enough to show that the Italians are quite equal in satirical power to any other people. They are using it now with a boldness—almost mercilessness—against the proud prelates and liveried servants of the church, which is as gratifying as it is surprising to us heretical outsiders to witness. Whoever has made a collection of the caricatures which have appeared during the year past will have in his possession an illustrated work which would give a person in a foreign country a better idea of what has recently been accomplished here than could be obtained from many printed volumes."

Gen. Stager.

This gentleman came in on the Cleveland and Pittsburgh cars this morning, from Western Virginia. He left Clarksburg at half past ten o'clock yesterday morning, and proceeded on his way to New York this afternoon, at which city it is important that he should arrive to-morrow afternoon.

Colonel Stager left General Rosecrans at Clarksburg, confident that he could hold the positions he had taken against any force that could be brought to bear against him by the rebels. The report which we received by telegraph, that Rosecrans was surrounded by rebels under Gen. Lee, is without foundation. Rosecrans fears no attack, but should it be attempted, he is prepared to meet them and will thrash them out.

There are important movements progressing by the Federal troops in Western Virginia. Our troops are in position, where they can be removed with ease from point to point.

Col. Stager has already erected some 200 miles of telegraph line in Western Virginia, by means of which all branches of the army are in constant correspondence.

Col. Tyler has joined General Cox at Guerly's Bridge, with his entire force, and it is not believed that the rebels can make any impression upon them.—[Cleveland Leader.

Interesting Points in Missouri—Springfield and Rolla.

The late battle between the forces under Lyon and McCullough, theschiefs of the two contending armies, on Saturday week, gave to the two towns of Springfield and Rolla no little interest.

Springfield is a flourishing town in southwestern Missouri, the capital of Greene county, and will be one of the principal stations of the southwestern branch of the Pacific Railroad. It is situated on high ground, and has a court-house, two newspaper offices, and a bank. Its population is estimated to be about 1,000. From St. Louis it is distant about 230 miles.

Rolla is a small place not laid down in ordinary maps, nor mentioned in the Gazetteer. It is the capital of Phelps county, made in 1857 out of portions of Pulaski and Crawford counties. It is one hundred and thirteen miles from St. Louis, and about an equal distance from Springfield, lying in a direct line between these two points. It forms the present terminus of the southwest branch of the Pacific Railroad from St. Louis to Springfield.

The battle first began on Davis Creek, in Green's Prairie, about nine miles southwest of Springfield; so that when the Federal troops made their retreat, they went back from Davis Creek to Springfield 9 miles, and from Springfield to Rolla, one hundred and thirteen miles, making the distance one hundred and twenty-two miles.—[Louisville Journal.

A Rebel Officer.

The Richmond (Va.) papers announce the appointment of George B. Crittenden, late Major in the United States Army, to be Brigadier-General in the army of the Confederate States. This Major Crittenden obtained his appointment in the United States Army about twenty years ago, not from any merits of his own, but through the influence of family and friends. He was a man they had all grown tired of supporting, and it was a happy idea, and successfully pushed, to quarter him on the United States Treasury, as an Army officer.

The emoluments of office, added to the indolence of Army life in the piping times of peace, combined to encourage habits of dissipation, already strong enough in Major Crittenden, and twice was his sword taken from him for drunkenness and consequent imbecility, but twice did a noble father's influence procure Executive interposition and restoration to rank. But now, at last, treason has sheathed the sword so long worn by the toleration of a generous Government, and the eldest-born of John J. Crittenden brings shame and sorrow upon his illustrious sire by accepting service against the Government that pitied and spared him so often.—[N. Y. Times.

THE SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.—We understand that the visit of Quartermaster-General Meigs to the North has resulted in the establishment of certain important rules and regulations concerning the purchase of supplies for the extraordinary necessities of the Army. We hear, furthermore, that it has been decided by the Government at Washington to appoint a Commissary-General, who will have charge of purchases, supplies and contracts of every kind connected with military operations;—and that his duties will be performed under a system of rules calculated to insure the most rigid accountability, and to give the public assurance of thorough efficiency and economy in this most important branch of the public service. Everything will unquestionably be thrown open to free and honorable competition, so that there will be no longer any suspicion that the public welfare will be overlooked out of regard for private interests. We have reason to believe that the appointment in question will be made during the present week.—[N. Y. Times.

A FEW WORDS ON RATIONS.—The British rout in Afghanistan, when they abandoned Cabul so disastrously, was due to one day's failure in provisioning the men. Marshal McMahon says that vast events depend upon an army's not going into action "till it had its coffee." We quote these words from Mrs. Parton, who adds that Napoleon says that what a soldier needs most in two things "a full belly and a pair of shoes"—and tells us that Frederic used to say, "An army, like a serpent, goes upon its belly."

COMMERCIAL RECORD.

Weekly Review of the Pittsburgh Markets

[Reported specially for the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

PITTSBURGH, THURSDAY, AUGUST 22, 1861.

There is no new or important feature to notice in any department of trade since our last report. The general markets remain without any essential change, while the demand for all the leading articles is limited and principally restricted to the immediate wants of the local trade.

Flour continues in light request, while prices, although a shade firmer, have undergone but little change. Groceries are steady and firm with a regular demand at full prices. In Provisions there has been but little done, with no change in quotations. Grain quiet and dull while prices are nominal.

[NOTE.—The quotations given in the following Review, it must be understood, are the wholesale prices, except where otherwise noticed, and that in all cases in the filling of small orders in the city and country trade, an advance of three to five per cent will be charged over these quotations.]

INCREASED FACILITIES FOR manufacturing, and the curtailment of litigation expenses consequent upon recent decision of the United States Courts, affirming the validity of the Grover & Baker Company's Patents, enable this company to furnish their Sewing Machines, with important improvements, at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES. The superiority of these Machines for family use and for manufacturers, in the same range of purpose and material, is attested by the tens of thousands using them. And the moderate prices at which they are now sold places them within the reach of all, and obviates all excuse for tampering with those inferior and low priced machines which have so much prejudiced the sewing machine business. IRISH LINENS,

CONSUMERS OF RICHARDSON'S LINENS, and those desirous of obtaining the GENUINE GOODS, should see that the articles they purchase are marked with the name of the firm,

J. N. RICHARDSON, SONS & OWDEN,

as a guarantee of the soundness and durability of the Goods.

This caution is rendered essentially necessary, as large quantities of inferior and fabrics to Linens are prepared, season after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON, by Irish Houses, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer and the manufacturers of the genuine Goods will not readily abandon a trickery so pernicious to character.
