PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 4, 1861.

The Republican Conventions.

We refer our readers to our local columns for a full report of the proceedings, yesterday, of the two Republican Conventions.

Contrary to the general expectation, the Conventions refused to form a "Union" ticket. We think this was a mistake; but as a majority of both Conventions thought it best to nominate a straight-out ticket, we defer to their judgment.

The nominations for Law Judges were made unanimously, and will receive a hearty approval from the people.

The re-nomination of Hon. JOHN P. PENNEY, for the Senate, will be hailed with delight, not only throughout the county, but all over the State; for no man ever served in the Senate who enjoyed a higher reputation than Mr. Penney, or more deservedly.

The Assembly ticket is considerably above the average of former years. The nominations of Messrs. Williams, Bigham, Shannon, and Hutchman are all good; but that of Sigismund Loew was "not fit to be made." A political Ishmaelite, whose hand is against every man and every man's hand against him, he has been making war for years upon our nominees and organization, and is even now, in his paper, the Volksblatt, making war upon the National Administration—so much so, indeed, that it is still an open question whether it or the Republikaner is the most deserving of being classed as a Secession sheet. What could have induced so respectable a Convention to make a nomination so disreputable?

The other nominees are all good men. We have not room now to speak of each, individually, nor is it at all necessary. They are all well known to the people and all well qualified for the places to which they have been named. There was a considerable struggle over most of these nominations; but there is a very general acquiescence in the result.

The Aspect of Things.

Things look decidedly more hopeful than they did two weeks ago. The brilliant and important naval victory gained by General Butler and Commodore Stringham on the coast of North Carolina, has at once gladdened and encouraged the hearts of the friends of the Union, and in a corresponding degree depressed the spirits of the rebels. That it was achieved without any loss whatever on our side is evidence that our ability to carry on a coast warfare is very great; for it will show to the rebels that their whole coast lies at the mercy of the government; for if two strong forts, armed with thirty heavy guns, could inflict no injury upon our ships of war, how can they hope to defend their coast successfully at any point?

Every day adds to the number and efficiency of our troops on the Potomac, while we have reason to believe that the rebel forces are not increasing, and that they really have no intention of making any advance upon Washington or anywhere else. In a few days, or weeks at farthest, we may look for an advance on the part of our forces; and when it does take place it will be a very different affair from the dash that was made at Manassas Junction six weeks ago. Nothing, however, will be lost by deferring that onward movement for a month longer. Our army is still rapidly gaining in strength and efficiency, and when it does move we all wish it to do so with resistless and majestic power, thoroughly crushing rebellion as it goes.

General Fremont's proclamation placing all Missouri under martial law is an unmistakable indication of the vigor and vigor with which the war is henceforth to be prosecuted. It is not a half-way but a whole-way measure, and that portion of it which proclaims freedom to the slaves of rebels is very significant and to the last degree important. It will make short work both of slavery and rebellion in that State; but the horrible state of things which the leaders of the rebellion had begun—a reign of outrage and terror—left the Commander-in-chief no alternative but to apply the short, sharp, decisive military regime, or leave the loyal citizens to be robbed and murdered by countless bands of marauders. The remedy is a terrible one, but nevertheless, under the circumstances, eminently right and proper.

In 1856 the politicians of the South proclaimed to their ignorant followers that if Fremont should be elected President of the United States, he would proclaim liberty to the slaves, and the story reached the ears of the slaves themselves, causing no little excitement and expectation. It is strikingly retributive that they, by their madness and wickedness, should have verified their own lie. Now the negroes will hear their masters cursing and denouncing that same Fremont for doing as a general in war what they said five years ago he would do as a President in peace. The effect of this strange coincidence upon such dark but excitable minds may be terrible. Again, the slaves upon one plantation will be set free because their master is a rebel: what effect will this have upon those of an adjoining plantation whose master may be loyal? It is very clear that this proclamation, if carried out with adequate power, will banish slavery from Missouri, and the day that that shall be accomplished will be the best day that State ever saw. Loyal citizens need not be allowed to suffer on this account; for if the public safety shall require that they shall be deprived of that kind of property, few would deny that the public treasury should render a reasonable compensation.

It cannot be disguised, however, that Fremont's proclamation will cause a profound sensation in Kentucky, and render the position of the loyal men there more embarrassing. They cling both to Slavery and the Union—many of them probably with more tenacity to Slavery than to the Union. So strange is the devotion of the Southern people to that institution, that even the right of a rebel to his slave is sacred in their eyes; therefore they would deprecate most earnestly the application of the same rule to their State that it is found necessary to apply to Missouri; and it may be that in a few weeks it will be found necessary, for Secession is almost as strong and rampant in the one as in the other. Thus does Providence seem to be identifying Slavery and Treason, in spite of all the efforts of men in every position of the public service to keep the former out of sight.

SENSATION DISPATCHES.—In the name of all that is decent we protest against the mania which has seized the telegraphic reporters of manufacturing big things out of little. A few days ago the whole country was alarmed with news from Western Virginia of a terrible disaster to the regiment of Col. Tyler, and thousands of hearts were made uneasy lest some relative or friend should be found among the 200 reported killed or missing. And now it turns out that the great battle was the slightest kind of a skirmish, with only 15 missing! The Clarksburg correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says:

"The amount of the whole thing, according to the latest advices is, that Col. Tyler was leisurely enjoying himself at breakfast, when, by means of a surprise, that can only be accounted for on the theory of terrible carelessness in the pickets and sentries, he was suddenly surprised and attacked by a superior force of the enemy. There was no fighting except the single rush. Our men, acting under the orders of Col. Tyler, from Gen. Cox, fell back, but did so in great disorder, losing fifteen men. Major Casement, who, with four hundred men, had been separated from the main body of the regiment, made his way safely back to Gauley, where the whole regiment was mustered and found to have but the fifteen above mentioned missing. No serious evil is apprehended from the affair, but it is mortifying that the force should have been "surprised" in such a manner, and that the loss of fifteen should have been experienced without any consequent gain."

Gen. Fremont's Proclamation.

It seems to be doubted by some whether Gen. Fremont had the sanction of the Government in taking the important step of proclaiming martial law, and bringing Missouri under the operation of the Act passed at the late session of Congress, commonly called the Confiscation Act.

Why should such a question arise? unless it is implied that such Acts were to remain without force—mere brutum fulmen—and that the Government should withhold its hand till Rebellion had done its utmost and attained its fullest strength. What folly of thought; what pusillanimity of action!

Clearly the time had come—fully come—to bring Missouri under the operation of the Confiscation Act, passed by Congress to strengthen the hands of the Government for the suppression of this Rebellion; and if we suppose that General Fremont has not directly had instructions from Washington, can we reasonably doubt that the general instructions under which he assumed the command of his department did not from the first authorize this important step?

Be this as it may, the loyal press of the country, without an exception in the Northern States, will stamp the act with public approbation. And even if the loyal, but peculiarly circumstanced, not to say trammelled, Louisville Journal condemns the act, it is only, after all, from a Kentucky stand-point—and done in the spirit of a proud man, who sees he has to take an unpleasant suggestion.

FREMONT'S PROCLAMATION.

How it is Regarded at Saint Louis.

St. Louis, Sept. 1.—The subjoined extract from the Republican, the leading democratic paper in this city, is a fair expression of the feeling with which the proclamation of Gen. Fremont is regarded by the citizens of St. Louis, many of whom I have seen to-day, and all of whom declare that the decided action of the commanding General is timely and right. The Republican says:

"The proclamation of Major General Fremont, which appears in another column, is the most important document which has yet appeared in the progress of the war. Let it be read with careful consideration by every citizen. The prompt visiting of the extremest penalties of martial law upon all rebels within the established military lines; the confiscation of the property of persons who shall take up arms against the government; and the declaration of absolute freedom to the slaves of all such persons; the extreme penalties to be visited upon bridge burners, railroad and telegraph destroyers, treasonable correspondence and libels, and peace destroyers of all kinds, are measures of the most extraordinary stringency; but the wisdom of their promulgation by the supreme officer in the army of the West we are confident will be conceded by every just and loyal citizen.

There is no longer any middle ground or room for traitors where the lawful government has sway. Gen. Fremont strikes boldly and fearlessly. The consolidated patriotism and the boundless resources of the great Northwest are at his beck. Let every faithful man, by word and deed, give aid and encouragement to this grand movement for the re establishment of the whole people."—[N. Y. Post.

Return of the Frigate Minnesota.

The United States steam-frigate Minnesota, Flag Officer S. H. Stringham commanding, arrived at this port this morning from Hatteras Inlet, bringing six hundred and seventy-four prisoners, who surrendered at Fort Hatteras on Thursday last.

The Minnesota left Hatteras Inlet yesterday (Sunday) morning, at which time the following government vessels remained at that point:

United States ship Susquehanna.
Sloop-of-war Pawnee.
Gunboat Monticello.

The flag officer, Commodore Stringham, has given orders to admit no person on board the Minnesota until the prisoners are removed from the vessel. An officer has been sent to Fort Lafayette to ascertain whether there are accommodations there for the prisoners; he has not yet returned, and it is uncertain whether the prisoners will be sent there or given into the custody of the United States Marshal. If they are sent to Fort Lafayette, the Minnesota will carry them down this evening or to-morrow.—[N. Y. Post.

BY THE reports of McCulloch and Price, detailing the incidents of the late battle at Davis' creek, Missouri, we are enabled to get very near the number of killed and wounded on the rebel side during that engagement. We give the figures below, compared with our own loss:

	Union Loss.	Rebel Loss.
Killed	223	287
Wounded	721	1,330
Missing	291	166
Total	1,235	1,783

Secessionists Arrested at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 1.—The houses of John W. Brown, General Ticket Agent of the Central Ohio Railroad, and Wm. Hutton, were searched last night. There was a decided sensation here on their arrest for treason. It is understood that cannon of big calibre will be ordered by the War Department, to Cincinnati, immediately. Part of the carriages for Camp Dennison battery, were thrown from the cars over the Alton trestle-work last night, and smashed.

GOOD ADVICE.—The entire Catholic clergy of Chicago, by concerted action, have advised all unemployed men in their congregations to enlist in Gen. Fremont's army.

REPUBLICAN AND UNION TRIUMPH IN COLORADO.—We have the gratifying news that Hon. H. P. Bennett, formerly of Nebraska City, now of Denver, has been elected delegate to Congress from Colorado, by about 1,800 majority. We know Mr. Bennett to be a true Union man, and a man of fine abilities, and rejoice to hear of his success.

HON. DAVID WILMOT.—In common with most of our contemporaries, we published last week a report, which first appeared in a New York paper, to the effect that Senator Wilmot was alarmingly, indeed hopelessly, ill. We rejoice to learn that the report is untrue. A letter from Mr. Wilmot himself, to B. Reed Myer, Surveyor of the Port, dated Towanda, August 30th, says: "I am much better than when I came home. I am improving very much, and hope soon to be well again."—Phila. Bul.

SOAP! SOAP!! SOAP!!!—THE CHEMICAL OLIVE ENGINE SOAP, manufactured by R. G. & J. H. SAWYER, is acknowledged to be the most serviceable of any kind yet offered to the public. Its superior advantages are found in its cheapness, saving of labor, and its efficacy in removing grease, paint, tar and; without injuring the skin, or in the least wise damaging the finest quality of goods. It can be used with all kinds of water.
Reference is made with pleasure to the subjoined certificate, emanating from gentlemen well known in this community, and who had every facility afforded of making it fully and fairly tested:
Quartermaster's Department of the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Regiments Pa. Vols.
"Sawyer's Chemical Olive Engine Soap" having been used very extensively in our Regiments, we have no hesitation in certifying that it was found admirably adapted to the use of the soldiers, and decidedly the most superior soap which could be procured for the service.
