and lawfully exercised upon elavery, the subject which principally oncerns us in this unnatural war. The writer says:

We shall find little difficulty on this point, if we bear in mind the important hopes of the rebels and their sympathizers, in regard to the blockade. On the 29th of Angust last, Mr. Henry W. Hayman, of Liverpool, for himself and others, addressed a letter to the Foreign Office, stating that an expedition was fitting out for trading with New Orleins, and claiming the profession of the government, or the permission to defend themselves, against the American blockading equadron.

They have enlisted in the cause of their country, and not that of an individual, and as soldiers and patriots, after the temporary effervescence of disappointment has worked itself off, will bow with submission to the decisions of higher powers. Fremont himself, with a meanimity that Fremont himself, with a maganit does him honor, counsels the promptest obedience to the orders of the President, and will hear of no demonstrations in his favor. He is wise as well as true in doing so: for if he has been wronged, the future will do him justice; and it will do him all the more justice because he will not allow his private grievances to imperil the interests of his country. Ohief of all the forces. We hardly think McCiellan remains commander in color army in a battle, although he may give up the immediate command until a forward movement takes place.

Frement's Dismissant.

Frement's Dismissant. Frement's Dismissat.

The event which has been so long an amounced is at length accomplished. Frement has been removed from his command. It has been determined by the government that it can no longer trust rather than trust that important mission to Mr. Pluckey. We was a Sub Carolina.

Mr. Pinckney, who was a South Caroli hands. At the very moment when he is in the face of the enemy, whom he has driven from point to point until a decisive battle or an ignominious flight are the only alternatives, he is ordered to surrender his place. The fact smites the community like the loss of a battle, but it must be borne with a firm mind.

His officers and soldiers, are, of course, very indignant, and they threaten to laydown their arms, but they will think twice before resorting to so despectate a measure.

The enticipated resignation of General Wool is the subject of considerable comment here. The cit veteran supposes that he is not susstained by the Administration, and he has some grounds for so thinking. There are not artilierists enough in Fortress Monroe to serve properly a dozen guis, and the fort is of such an extent that under present diremstances it is essentially weak. Why the most important strategic point upon the Southern coast should be left; in a partially defenceless condition cannot be seen. General Wool has made representations of a similar import to the Administration, and his failure to elicit an affirmative response, furnish grounds for supposing that not the fullest confidence is placed in him.

Another trouble of a more portentious chair-Another trouble of a more portentious chaiacter threatens the safety of this fort. It comes from excellent authority that there are two field officers, a mejor and lieutenant colonel of artillery, who are favorable to the rebel cause. Why not send a few traiterous officers as well as refractory privates to the Dry Tortegas? At that point communication with the rebels would be more difficult than here, where contrabands fit from gamp to camp, and "Confederate ressels" flaunt their smoke sucks in our high.—Ger. Com. Adver.
