A STATE OF STATE and the same and the same The state of the preparation of the ordinance just read, as subodying in its most intelligible shape the proposition of Mr. Lanier, with the legislaproposition of Mr. Lanier, with the legisla-tion required to meet it.

Mr. McDonald offered the following resolution:
Resolved, By the Select and Common Coun-Recofeed. By the Select and Common Councils that we deem it inexpedient at the present time to take any action in regard to compromising with the Railroad Bondholders, as it is just on the eve of a city election, and our time of office just about to expire. The subject is of too much importance to the citizens to be legislated upon hastly: it involves an annual tax which weigh heavily on our city. Therefore, we believe it should be left to the Conneils of 1862 to make the provisions for such a tax, if they believed it to be just.

On a motion to adopt the resolution, Mr. McDonald spoke at length in favor of the resolution, and in opposition to the action proposed by the ordinance. He contended that it was actually an appropriation of Sife. 1000 per annum, and he was not prepared to vote for such a measure at the close of his term. When the new Councils were voted for, the matter could be brought before the people, and an expression of their views upon the a which could be had at the same time.

for, the matter count we assume the people, and an expression of their views upon the subject could be had at the same time. This bond question was not in any shape one of the issues at the time of his election, or that of the present Councils, and he favored the bringing of the matter directly before the people. Gentlemen might assert here that people. Gentlemen might assert here that the people were in favor of the settlement of the bond question and the levy of a tax, but how did they know it? The gentlemen themhow did they know it? The gentlemen themselves might favor the course, but they did not know how a majority of the people would act; the question should be put before them. For one, he knew no precedent for an appropriation at the close of the year, and would oppose it.

Mr. Atwell replied. He thought the sooner Councils entered upon the settlement of this question the better. Unless something was done very soon to relieve the treasury from the burthen of the executions now resting on it. the wheels of the city government would question the better. Unless something was done very soon to relieve the treasury from the burthen of the executions now resting on it, the wheels of the city government would be looked. Until that execution was removed, not one dollar could be paid out next year. The payment of this ratiroad debt has been contested until the last extremity. It has been expealed from one court to another until decided against the city by the highest court in the United States. There was nothing left now to do but to provide for the payment of the bonds, unless some compromise could be effected. Every legal remedy has been exhausted, and the dott must be paid.

Mr. Hutchinson called the attention of the last speaker to the fact that assertion was not always exactly proof. The cases had been carried through the courts, and judgments had gone against the city, but it did not by any means follow that the claim must be paid. Execution and collection were two different things, as any one could tell who ever such railroad companies. It was one thing to win a suit against them, and another to secure its liquidation. He for one would not support this measure, nor pay this tax. If the people at the ballet box instructed him to vote for the redinance, he would do it, but not otherwise.

Mr. Riddle supported the same views and secured with the citil.

Mr. Riddle supported the same views as Messrs. Atwell and Asworth, with the additional suggestion, that instead of levying an amunal tax of $14,000 to adopt this ordinance, if the proposition should be accepted, as the present debt, unless compromised as proposed would require provisions for meeting as interest of $50,000, for which executions have been laid on the city treasury.

Mr. Hoddle supported the same views as "Roberts Infantry," a volunteer company from Beaver county, now in Camp Curtin, have recently signed the following pledge:
