following striking passages from speeches of Mr. Adams, delivered some years later It was as early as the 25th of May, 1836. that Mr. Adams first expounded what he called 'The war power and treaty-making power of the Constitution." Then it was that he declared:

"From the instant that your slaveholding States become the theatre of war, civil, ser-vile or foreign, from that instant the war, powers of Congress extend to interference, with the institution of Slavery in every with the institution of Slavery in every way in which it can be interfered with. from a claim of indemnity for slaves taken or destroyed, to the cession of the State bur-daned with Slavery to a foreign Power." Again, on the 7th of June, 1841, after many years of reflection, and added experience in public life, he terrified slave-masters by showing that universal emancipation might be accomplished through this extraordinary power. Afterward, on the 14th of April, 1842, for the third time he stated the doctrine in the House of Representatives, and challenged criticism or reply. An extract will "I lay this down as the law of nations. Is sy this down as the law of nations. I say that the military authority takes, for the time, the place of all municipal institutions, Slavery among the rest. Under that state of things, so far from it being true that the States where Slavery exists have the exclusive management of the subject, not only the President of the United States,

And then again he asks in words applicable to the present hour:

'Sra My attention has been drawn to your animadversions on the presence of Mestra Mann and Yancoy at the Fishmon-gers' Company's dinner on Lord Mayor's tar; but I have that of the Globe, which gives Mr. Yancey's speech at length, as received with repeated cheers all through, and says nothing more.

"It is true there were repeated cheers, but there was also repeated clamor and in-terruption, arising, I think, a good deal from the impatience of those who could not hear, but also from some disapprobation and sums, our due from some disapprobation and wonder that these gentlemen were there, and want of sympathy with them, and a reluctance to appear as being mixed up with their cause. "I may add that they were not there in any official capacity, nor, I believe, were they invited by the Court, but were only present as the guests of some individual member or members of the company,
