Office, 435 and 437 In the Senate of the United States, on the 18th inst. The following resolution was before the Senate:

Resolved That the Committee on Military Affairs and the Militia be directed to consider the expediency of providing by additional legislaton that our national armies shall not be employed in the surrender of fugitive slaves.

Mr. Cowax. I think, sir, that all this mischief, so much complained of everying general whom we send into rebellious districts must first make a proclamation when he goes there as to what he is going to do in all possible contingencies, many of which contingencies he can never foresee. I have hardly ever known of any one of these proclamations which was not mischievous. If it was satisfactory to the people of the North, if was sure to be obnoxious to the border States whom we are now desirous to conciliate.
