Pittsburgh Gazette. The Mason and Slidell Affair in JEW ADVERTISEMENTS, Washington. SEALED PROPOSALS, Until the 30th HOLIDAY PRESENTS. HOLIDAY GIFTS. TUESDAY MORNING, DEC: 24, 1861. The Tendency of all Patriotic Minds Is to the position that the permanent peace and future presention of the country, re-quire that slavery shall be overthrown in the present contest. There are many good men who are opposed to any definite action on the subject either by the President or Congress, because they believe the desired result will inevitably be reached without the official action of the Government, by the stern influences of the war. Others think the time for governmental action has now is the right time to inaugurate a policy in regard to slavery which shall place the fore the country and all civilized nations. The President, it is admitted by all these parties, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, has the War power to do with slavery whatever he may deem will with slavery whatever he way deem will met conduce to the overthrow of the re-parties, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, has the War power to do with slavery whatever he may deem will we conduce to the overthrow of the re-parties, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, has the War power to do with slavery whatever he may deem will we discurve, the presented correspondent of what have and the is the vertice of the re-parties, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, has the War power to do with slavery whatever he may deem will we discurve, the presented correspondent of what have and the is the vertice of the re-parties, and the is the resurce of the re-to the resurve of the special dispatch to the New York DRY GOODS. 		come to an end 1 We hope Congress will soon end the sus- pense of the people. As the matter now stands, it seems to us imperative that Con- gress should act. The President has de- clined the responsibility. He has thrown it upon Congress. Unless Congress adopt some settled policy, we are left at sea, drifted about with every storm, and ready at any moment to fall among the breakers. It is no use to tell us that the President has the War Power to settle this question without the aid of Congress, because he has, in his Message, devolved the responsi- bility upon that august body. He may any that if Congress will not take a respon- sibility which is divided among so many, why should he take it singly and alone. Let Congress, then, pass a carefully consid- ered law, and if it at all comes up to the weighty domands of the occasion, it will meet with universal acceptance, and give quiet to the perturbed public mind. 		come to an end 1 We hope Congress will soon end the sus- pense of the people. As the matter now stands, it seems to us imperative that Con- gress should act. The President has de- elined the responsibility. He has thrown it upon Congress. Unless Congress adopt some settled policy, we are left at sea, drifted about with every storm, and ready at any moment to fall among the breakers. It is no use to tell us that the President has the War Power to settle this question without the aid of Congress, because he has, in his Message, devolved the responsi- bility upon that august body. He may any that if Congress will not take a respon- sibility which is divided among so many, why, should he take it singly and alone. Let Congress, then, pass a carefully consid- ered haw, and if it at all comes up to the weighty demands of the occasion, it will meet with universal acceptance, and give quiet to the perturbed public mind.
