FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 10, 1862. Relations of Congress to the Army. We referred, in our last, to the important proceedings in Congress Felative to the refusal of Gen. McCLELLAN to comply with any steps had been taken to investigate the disaster of Ball's Bluff. Mr. Roscoe. Conkling, of New York, who introduced the matter, gave one of the most thrilling recitals of that terrible disaster we have ever read. He considered the reply of the Commander-la-Chief as evasive, and the dignity of the House demanded that they should not be trifled with. Mr. Conkling then went on to say that the battle of Ball's Bluff was the most atroclous military murder ever committed in the course of our history, the most humiliating triumph of Rosco Manney and the say that the battle of Ball's More ever committed in the course of our history, the most humiliating triumph of Rosco Manney and Mile of Malle, wellon, of Pennsylvania, Biddle, 18 Mrs. March. Salley, of Pennsylvania, Biddle, 18 Mrs. March. Salley, of Pennsylvania, Biddle, 18 Mrs. Mesers. Balley, of Pennsylvania, Biddle, 18 Mrs. Mrs. Mesers. a resolution of the House inquiring whether der ever committed in the course of our history, the most humiliating triumph of the rebellion, a blunder so gross that no one has dared to defend it. Nine hundred and thirty men lost their lives by this blunder, and the resolution which the Commander in Chief had evaded, and which was passed the second day of the session, was due to the memory of these slain, if to was due to the memory of these slain, if to nothing else. He asked for an inquiry, James Buchanan and His Friends. and an inquiry was absolutely necessary. Suppose, said Mr. Conkling, that it should appear that Gen. Stone is only half loyal, tained in a late letter to the Press. Its or half a soldier; is that a sufficient and severity consists in its truth: good reason why he should be released from stavery than desirous of subduing the re-bellion. Mr. Crittenden took the extraor-dinary ground, that the House, under the Constitution, had no power to inquire into matters purely military. Mr. Crittenden's matters purely military. Mr. Crittenden's course has been so eccentric of late, that what he might say would be of little acerable party in Congress, and were there not good reason to believe that threats have been made by a certain class of army officers against Congress. It is high time that this spirit was crushed, and we are glad that the House reiter ated their request by such count were he not supported by a consid- traitor to freedom and humanity, she an overwhelming majority. The importance of this vote, the folly of Mr. Crittenden, and the danger which impends over the country, should the slightest disrespect

Conkling's denunciation of this offer to the excitement which it occasioned among the members; but we do wonder that any member of the House of Representative should be found who could say, as Mr. Richardson, of Illinois, and Mr. Crittender Richardson, of Illinois, and Mr. Crittenden, of Kentucky, did, that Congress has nobling to do with military matters, why were its members called together in a special session last summer? If Congress has nobling to do with military matters, why were its members called together in a special session last summer? If Congress has nobling to do with military matters, why is that body called upon to one of foreign powers, if we wish to take adjusted the congress has nobling to do with military matters, why is that body called upon to one of foreign powers, if we wish to take adjusted the congress has nobling to do with military matters, why is that body called upon to one of foreign powers, if we wish the seep alive the devotion and in the South if we mean to repulse the interior which are raised by the authority of Congress if should keep its of the great soot of the search of the great soot of the great soot was upon the President it should see are wielded for their just and legitimate ends. It behooves us to keep this army in the strictest and most unquestioning subordination to the civil power. Our country is in such, a condition—that, instead of forbearing to inquire into matters purely military, as Mr. Crittenden desires, it is the duty of Congress exercise over them the duty of Congress exercise over them the have sedulously promoted an uprising of the negroes and which would not have fought the white insurrection with a black duty of Congress exercise over them the sharpest and most wakeful supervision. We cannot safely allow, on the part of the commander, of our army, the slightest symptom of a disposition to brave the civil government. One step of that nature will naturally lead to another; one assumption of independence on the part of the military power will lead to a bolder one, till by little and little we may slide into a military described.

We cannot safely allow, on the part of the opmander, of our army, the slightest symptom of a disposition to brave the civil government. One step of that nature will government. One step of that nature will naturally load to another; one assumption of independence on the part of the military power will lead to a bolder one, till by little we may alide into a military despotism.

We are brought to this conclusion, then, that General McClellan has been guilty of a proceeding which cannot be overlooked Charity would make as hope and the compromise Act, you know—and they would cut all their masters, to come and to cut our throats, you know—which will be more agreeable to the forms of the Constitution, which way or other—the full growtness which will be more agreeable to the forms of the Constitution, which way or other—the full growtness and they would cut all their masters, to come and to cut our throats—which will be more agreeable to the owner without a full consideration of its mature, and consequences. It must be stoned for in some way or other—the full growtness when the can he allowed to hold his place at the head of the army. Conkling offered a preamble setting forth the resolution herectofore adopted, together with the reply to it, and concluding with a resolution declaring that the answer is the days of Warren Hastings, and nearly start the south and Empire City—the days of Warren Hastings, and nearly start the South, and Empire City—the days of Warren Hastings, and nearly start the South, and Empire City—the days of Warren Hastings, and nearly start the South, and Empire City—the days of Warren Hastings, and nearly start the South, and Empire City—the days of Warren Hastings, and nearly start the start the start the start the start the start the start that the start neither responsible nor satisfactory, and directing the Secretary of War to reply further.

The One Solution of our Difficulties, Is immediate, rapid, persistent action. The war must be pushed onward into the enemy's country-blow after blow must be rapto Congress be permitted in the army, are idly struck. We must have something to well set forth in the following extract from show for our elaborate and expensive prean editorial in the New York Evening Post:

But the warmth of Mr. We do not wonder at the warmth of Mr. in earnest. These things must be done or, Premature Decay, &c., &c., by one who has conkling's denunciation of this offer to soon or our difficulties will be terribly increased. The case is ably stated in the following extract:

By every consideration, then, it becomes imperative to proceed the war with far more vigor than has yet been shown in and about Washington. If we wish to raise money for the war, if we wish to take advantage of the loyal sentiment lurking in the South, if we mean to repulse the interference of foreign powers, if we hope to dispose entirely of the endless embarragements of the above controvery if in the drawing them, one after another, from its inspection and authority.

We have an army of nearly seven hundred thousand man on foot—an army like those by which the despots of the old world hold their subjects in fear and obedience. It behooves us to keep this army in the strictest and most naquestioning subording the subjects and most naquestioning subording the subjects and most naquestioning subording the subject of the subject and most naquestioning subording the subject of the su publicans, with a lew rare exceptions, are found among the yeas. Among the nays cessfully done till the rebels are driven out are the Vallandighams, the Coxes, the Crit. Or North-Eastern Virginia. So long as they reverse Windows they possess Winchester as a base of ope lican found in very bad company. The ations, they will be able to throw forward detachments upon some feebly guarded point, tear up the track, burn the bridges, destroy the culverts, and retirebefore force sufficient to repet them can be marched to sufficient to repel them can be marched to the point assailed. This was illustrated in the summer campaignin Western Virginia. When the rebels occupied Romney with a much smaller body of men than now holds Winchester, it was found impossible to keep communication open with Cumber-land, and the sudden destruction of a bridge East of Rawlsburg, cut off Col. Lew. Wallace's regiment, and for a time placed them in a very perilous position. It was a foolish undertaking to attempt to bridge the Potomac at Harper's Ferry, and ended, as we predicted it would, in an utter failure. Had General Banks remained at Sandy Hook long enough to have en-abled the workmen to rebuild the bridge, it would have availed nothing. As soon as he withdrew the rebels appeared at Harper's Ferry, and would have destroyed the structure, had it been completed.

The first business there, as it should be elsewhere, is to fight. Once compel an evac-uation of Winchester, Martinsburg and Charleston, and the road can be opened and operated throughout its entire line with safety. To attempt it without such a lowing terrible phillippic from his pen, conmilitary movement in advance, is an idle pusiness, a waste of time and money than ust inevitably end in disappointment. incinnati Commercial.

He said that the Government was spending two millions daily, and had 600,000 men in the field; whenever we have been outnumbered and ignominiously defeated; and yet the House, and the people whom the House represents are denied the right of knowing on whose shoulders lies the blame of these things. We should know, said he, whether the General-in-Chief has taken the pains to inquire who is responsible for the battle at Ball's. Bluff, and we should make the inquiry with the intention of being answered. After some further most severe remarks upon the aubject, Mr. Conkling offered a presamble setting forth the resolution heretofore adopted, together EIGHT CHILDREN AT A BIRTH .- On the 2d of
